Keep Your Land.
Red Hats, Coming.
Edison's Two Mistakes.
Calvin Coolidge Says.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 19.

RAIN falling today, and plenty of it recently, much to the delight of Californians. This country without rain would be like a factory with no pay day. Fortunately, rain always comes, to be stored up in the soil, piled up in snow on the mountains. The Pacific Coast measures the rainfall, measures the snow depth and thus measures crops in advance.

THIS writer is asked by friendly editors that print his articles, in Wisconsin, Florida, Texas, etc., "Why do you talk so much about California?"

The answer is, because you write inevitably about the place in which you happen to be. In Heaven, it would be necessary to write a great deal about Heaven, although another combined place might be more exciting.

ONE lady who owns Florida real estate suggests, "You must have put your money in California land."

No, the humble writer has a 10 times greater sum invested in Florida real estate than in California land, one hundred times more in New Jersey than in California and Florida, and a thousand times more in New York City than in all other states. And none of it, for sale. Get good land. Keep it, and it will keep you. But don't buy trash.

This place is interesting, because as George Bleistein, insurance and real estate expert from Buffalo, remarked today at the Biltmore Hotel, "you can figure easily that Los Angeles is growing four times faster than the United States, as a whole. It is difficult to estimate what that growth will mean in time."

TWO HUNDRED intelligent members of the Retail Clothiers and Hatters' Association, gathered at San Diego, to discuss an important question: "Can American men be persuaded to buy and wear bright red felt hats?"

OF COURSE they can. Women wear every color, and men are much vainer than women, although they hide it.

A red hat is best to wear in the woods, shooting, to avoid being mistaken for a deer.

That will give American men an excuse for the red felt.

MR. EDISON is hopeful about a rubber supply from goldenrod. Chemists who think it ought to be done by some synthetic process, and victims of hay fever, are less optimistic.

The great inventor, 83 years old, says he wants only five years more, to finish this job, and doesn't ask to live 100 years.

MR. EDISON says he takes good care of his health, stays in a warm climate until June 15. But he is making two big mistakes. He says he is "living on a milk diet and sleeps seven hours a day."

Seven hours' sleep is not enough; he should have more, at 83.

No man works more than 10 hours a day, no matter how he deceives himself about his working powers.

NOBODY can live permanently on a milk diet, because milk contains no iron, which is absolutely necessary to the blood.

That is why mothers store up in the unborn baby's liver enough iron to last through the nursing period.

And why nature makes a baby's liver, in proportion, several times as big as it is in adult life.

Every doctor will tell Mr. Edison that he must add to his milk diet some food with plenty of iron. Spinach is good. A French doctor would say "Red wine," the skin of a black grape having more iron than any other vegetable.

And Mr. Edison should have at least two eggs a day, beaten up in warm milk.

CALVIN COOLIDGE says little, but often says much in a few words. At Mr. Hearst's ranch on the edge of the Pacific Mr. Coolidge listened with interest to the propounding of various puzzles, mathematical problems, etc., by ex-Senator Hitchcock, a guest with him. For instance, "If a bottle and a cork cost one dollar and five cents, and if the bottle costs one dollar more than the cork, how much does the cork cost?" That's a Ripley puzzle.

The answer, to save you trouble, is two and one-half cents.

Mr. Coolidge, listening, offering no solutions, remarked finally:

"Senator, I suppose in the Senate you all have plenty of time to work out such problems."

Senator Hitchcock tells that.

IN THESE days of birth control, ladies will be interested in Mrs. Chris Back, who lives at Whitesburg, Ky.

She has had six children in eleven months, two sets of triplets, 11 alive.

All honor to Mrs. Back, and congratulations to mothers that are more moderate. If every woman had six children in eleven months, the earth would eventually be over-populated, although not soon.

Texas alone, intensively cultivated, would feed all the present inhabitants of the globe, with room left for baseball fields and golf courses.

EARL OF BALFOUR

Lord Balfour, former British premier who died today at 81.

IRENE ENACTS KILLING FOR JURY WITH GUN OF SLAIN OFFICER

EX-PREMIER BALFOUR DEAD

Noted and Veteran British Statesman Succumbs to Old Ailment of Throat

WOKING, Surrey, England, March 19.—(AP.)—The Earl of Balfour, veteran British stateman, died here at 8:45 a. m, today in a room at the home of his brother, the Hon. Gerald Balfour.

The end came peacefully to the statesman, who was in his eighty-second year. He had been distressingly ill for a long time with laryngitis, and came here after an improvement in his condition to convalesce. He had several setbacks and was never able to return to his home at Whittinghame, Prestonkirk, East Lothian, Scotland.

VISITED AMERICA

From the time he entered Parliament in 1874 until the closing years of his life he figured as an important factor in British politics. He visited America as head of the British commission in 1917 and was a member of the British delegation to the Washington Arms Conference in 1922.

Secretary for Scotland in 1886, Chief Secretary for Ireland, First Lord of the Admiralty, Foreign Secretary, Prime Minister and member of innumerable government missions and committees, the Earl of Balfour's political life spanned by a good margin the latter years of the reign of Queen Victoria, down through the reign of King Edward VII and through more than 15 years of the reign of King George.

BALFOUR NOTE RECALLED

He was most famous perhaps for the so-called Balfour note in which Great Britain renounced all post-war claims in Continental

TAFT SPEAKS FROM GRAVE FOR DRYS

Letter Declares Prohibition 'Glorious'; Benefits Cited By Salvation Army Leader

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The late Chief Justice and ex-President William Howard Taft reached the conclusion before his death that the results of prohibition have been "glorious" and the Eighteenth Amendment "will achieve a satisfactory result" if the drys keep up their fight.

The views of Mr. Taft, often quoted on both sides of the dry fight, were embraced in a letter written to Irving Fisher, professor of economics at Yale University, presented for consideration of the House Judiciary Committee today by Prof. Horace D. Taft, the late President's brother.

The letter came like a voice from the grave of the ex-President, who was buried only last week with the highest honors the nation could bestow, to clear up the dispute over his convictions on the question.

Commander Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation Army, declaring that prohibition had improved the lot of the poor, also was read.

MR. TAFT'S LETTER

Unable to speak in life, while in the cloister of the Supreme Court, Chief Justice Taft made known his views in the letter, dated November 21, 1928, after the presidential campaign, during which he was frequently quoted. It said:

"In the late campaign I found myself in a very awkward situation. I could not issue any publication during it, because of my being on the bench, and yet the New York World published my anti-prohibition letters written to Lincoln (a dry of New Haven) before the adoption of the amendment, and then nobody semed to take the trouble to publish my speech at Yale, given after the amendment was adopted.

"But the result is glorious and points the only way that we have to work out the problem presented. The solution requires a great deal of time and

BLONDE COOL PICTURING SHOOTING

Prosecutor Takes Part of Dead Corporal to Show Fatal Fight After Holdup

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 19.—Grasping the revolver of the officer she is charged with slaying, Irene Schroeder today re-enacted the shooting of Corp. Brady Paul before the jury which will determine her fate.

The blonde former waitress, eyes ablaze, backed Special Prosecutor Charles J. Margiotti, who posed as Paul, around the bench which represented the back of the automobile in which she and her companions were fleeing from a Butler store holdup.

A short time before, Irene had demonstrated the store holdup and testified she "thrilled" for 15 minutes and was "tickled" at the success of the Butler robbery.

COOL IN DEMONSTRATION

It was a tense 10 minutes as the trigger woman, holding the dead officer's gun, illustrated how she covered both Paul and Private Ernest Moore, of the state highway patrol, who had intercepted Irene and her companions in their flight, on the Butler-New Castle road, December 27.

With the gun in her right hand the blonde went forward slightly and aimed the weapon at Margiotti as he backed across the courtroom in front of the jury. The blonde was as cool as Margiotti.

Irene had insisted on cross-examination by Margiotti that the first shot had been fired before she reached the back of the car. Her sweetheart, W. Glenn Dague, was with her, also armed, she admitted.

AIMED AT CHEST

"Did you see Dague fire at Paul?"

"No."

"Do you know whether he fired at Paul?"

"He didn't."

"Then the only shot fired at Paul was by you?"

"Yes."

"And you aimed at his chest?"

"Yes."

"Did you hit him?"

"I don't know. He kept backing up."

"How many shots did you fire?"

"One."

HOLDUP PICTURED

In re-enacting the Butler store holdup, Margiotti took the place of Wish Angert, the proprietor. Irene showed the jury how she had leveled a gun at Angert, who later was bound and gagged.

"After you were through at Butler you were perfectly cool as

UNION CAB LINE ENJOINED

The union cab drivers today were enjoined by a court order from operating their own taxicab service.

The injunction was obtained by the Parmelee Transportation Company and was granted by Judge Josiah Cohen on the ground that the union drivers were operating without a certificate of convenience from the Public Service Commission.

The injunction named the strikers' union and 33 individuals, including members of the strikers' executive committee.

CONTINUE CAB OPERATION

Following the issuance of the court order, A. T. Sifford and Ralph Trafford, strike leaders, conferred with Attorney Henry Ellenbogen. Later they gave out this statement:

"We will continue to operate the union relief fund car service from the headquarters at 1711 Liberty avenue."

It was reported that Attorney Ellenbogen would present a peti-

SCHWAB CALLED TO AID MERGER

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 19.—(AP.)—In the hope of winning votes for the Bethlehem Steel Corporations and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company merger, Eugene Grace, president, and Charles Schwab, chairman of the board of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, were invited today to address the Youngstown Chamber of Commerce at a public meeting. The date has not yet been set.

Cyrus W. Eaton of Cleveland, leader of the opposition to the deal, also has been invited to address the chamber of commerce and his reply is expected soon.

Eaton's plans for the steel industry envision two great independent companies working in "friendly competition," both with headquarters in Youngstown and both strengthened by absorption of mid-western companies, the Cleveland financier said today in a statement of his reasons for opposing the sale of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company to Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

The two companies are Sheet and Tube and Republic Steel Corporation. Eaton is the largest single stockholder of Sheet and Tube, and holds control of Republic.

Opposing sides have only until Saturday, when the books will be closed, to purchase stock which may be voted. The nearness of the deadline was reported to have spurred bidding as high as $150 a share in private transactions, although this was not reflected in exchanges.

It was reported that local stockholders were strongly in favor of acquisition of the $100,000,000 Inland Steel Company of Chicago as an alternative to merging with Bethlehem.

Ship Fighting Storm With Propeller Gone

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 19.—(INS.)—The United States Coast Guard announced today that the coastwise steamer Prentiss, en route from San Francisco to Umpaqual River, has been sighted off Coquille River, Ore., in distress.

The vessel has dropped her propeller and when sighted was maneuvering around in a 60-mile gale in an effort to keep from going ashore. The Prentiss carries a crew of 20 men under command of Capt. Jorgan Greaves.

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—(AP.)—Announcing he had been requested by friends to run for the United States Senate on a wet ticket, J. Hampton Moore, former mayor of Philadelphia, said here last night that he probably would "have something to say on the matter in a few days."

Should Mr. Moore decide to enter the race it would make both the senatorial and gubernatorial battles three-cornered affairs.

Jury Completed In Mae West Trial

NEW YORK, March 19.—A jury was completed today in the trial of Mae West and 57 other defendants charged with giving an indecent play—"Pleasure Man."

The court immediately dismissed the jurors until tomorrow that counsel for the defendants might argue motions for dismissal of the case. The blonde Miss West, dressed in her usual midnight black, suppressed a yawn every now and then throughout the procedure.

SIX CITIES DRY, 11 FOR CHANGE

NEW YORK, March 19.—(Universal.)—Of a total of 17 cities, all in the Middle West except three, which have reported to date in the Literary Digest's nation-wide poll on prohibition, 11 showed decided wet tendencies.

This is according to figures released at the magazine's offices.

The returns, as yet incomplete, have been announced over the radio and in the newspapers of the cities where the vote was taken.

Of the six places where enforcement was favored as against modification or repeal, three are in Kansas. They are Topeka, Wichita and Kansas City. Des Moines, Ia.; Lincoln, Neb., and Kansas City, Mo., are the others.

The dry vote in the Missouri city is regarded as something of a surprise, since that place was generally believed to be a wet center.

The vote announced by the Digest for three of the more important cities follows:

	Enforce-ment	Modi-fication	Repeal	Total
Cleveland	1,561	6,099	9,596	17,256
Dayton	1,160	1,221	1,477	3,858
Indianapolis	1,113	1,833	1,443	4,389

7 Kinloch Mine-Rescue Heroes Get Medals

An explosion had blocked the exits from Kinloch mine, near Parnassus, and 300 were entombed, their lives threatened by dangerous gases.

Seven assistant foremen and fire bosses fought through the tunnels filled, sometimes, with icy water to their armpits. They reached the men, scattered through the subterranean passages and led them out, safely. That was a year ago.

Today seven medals were awarded, it was announced by the Department of Commerce in Washington. They are the Joseph A. Holmes safety medals, and with each goes a certificate of commendation.

The recipients are E. R. Jobes, now manager of the Valley Camp Coal Company, owner of the mine; James Hogan, Edward L. Haas, John A. Kearney, John J. Murhamer, James McGuire and Robert Stevenson.

Approximately 155 lives are attributed to Jobes, Hogan, Haas and Kearney.

Murhamer is accredited with bringing 16 men to the surface; McGuire and Stevenson led 40 to safety.

The medals have not yet been presented, it was said at the mine office.

CAPONE OUTWITS POLICE, VISITS CHICAGO, VANISHES

MEETS AIDES AND LEAVES FOR SOUTH

International News Service.

CHICAGO, March 19.—Al Capone secretly visited Chicago last night.

This was learned today by International News Service on reliable authority, while police asserted that they still weer in the dark as to his whereabouts.

It was reported that Capone, released with the utmost secrecy Monday from Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia, had gone to Indiana following his brief stay here, and was to hold a "business conference" there with his chief lieutenants at a secret rendezvous. His next stop, it was reported, will be Florida.

ELUDES POLICE

In entering Chicago, Capone eluded police cordons which all day yesterday maintained a constant vigil at all his known haunts and at every conceivable point of entrance, including airports.

According to the International News Service's information, "Scarface Al" resorted to the strategy of arriving in Chicago from the southwest while expected from the east.

Instead of coming directly from Philadelphia, it was said, he went to St. Louis by train, and then came to Chicago on the Chicago and Alton, arriving here at 10:30 p. m., accompanied by his wife, son and his bodyguard, Frank Rio, who served his Philadelphia jail term with him.

DIDN'T HIDE IDENTITY

"Trainmen recognized him readily, and he made no effort to shield his identity," one informant said. "When he left the train he shook hands with the trainmen, waved, and said: 'See you again, boys'—then hurried away. Whether they took a taxicab from the station or were met by a private car I was unable to learn."

Just what course the police would follow if they did find the gang chieftain in Chicago was not revealed. They declared yesterday that their principal aim was to prevent him from receiving an elaborate reception, either peaceful or otherwise.

'Arrest Capone, Run Him Out Of Florida,' Governor Orders

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 19.—(AP.)—Gov. Doyle E. Carlton today drafted a telegram to Florida sheriffs, requesting them to arrest Al Capone if he appears in the state.

The governor's telegram read: "It is reported that Al Capone is on his way to Florida. Arrest promptly if he comes your way and escort him to state border with instructions not to return. He cannot remain in Florida. If you need additional assistance, call me."

The governor was here today to attend governor's day at the Florida State Fair. He drafted the telegram at his hotel room.

DEFENSE RESTS IN DOHENY CASE

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP.)—The defense of Edward L. Doheny to a charge of bribery in connection with the Elk Hills oil-reserve lease concluded presentation of testimony and rested its case today shortly before noon.

Doheny is charged with giving Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, a bribe of $100,000 for the award of the Elk Hills (Cal.) naval oil reserve to a Doheny company.

Counsel for Doheny asked Justice Hitz to instruct the jury that under the law Fall, who was convicted of accepting the bribe, could be guilty and the wealthy oil man at the same time be innocent of giving it.

The government at the same time asked that the jury be instructed that if Doheny gave $100,000 to Fall intending to influence his award of the Elk Hills naval oil reserve, he be found guilty.

The pleas were made with the jury absent only a short time before final argument in the case was to begin.

Navy Chute Jumper Hurt in Auto Crash

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP.)—William F. Scott, 36, who has survived more than 200 leaps from high flying airplanes and is known as the Navy's champion jumper, was seriously injured here last night in an automobile accident.

He suffered a fractured skull, severe lacerations of the head and face and bruises about the body. He has the rating of chief aviation machinist's mate.

Hundreds Flee Fire In Philadelphia Hotel

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—(INS.)—Two thousand persons were aroused when fire broke out on the ninth floor of the Adelphia Hotel at Thirteenth and Chestnut streets early today causing $50,000 damage before it could be extinguished. Skeleton Starts Pirate-Gold Hunt in N. J.

BURLINGTON, N. J., March 19.—(INS.)—Tales of pirates' gold stirred this peaceful little town again today.

The discovery of a skeleton with a bullet hole through the skull close to the spot where once stood the "Witch tree," made famous in stories of the notorious Blackbeard and his band of pirates, started the volunteer searchers on their quest.

The skeleton was found by Ralph Abdill in his yard late yesterday.

Abdill excavated several feet below the skeleton but without finding any treasure. He planned to dig anew today.

During the last century numerous reports of buried pirate booty has swept through this village and many futile excavations have been made.

WOMAN BROKER SENTENCED

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Miss Margaret E. McCann, who was the first woman to become a broker in Wall street, was sentenced today by Judge Otto A. Rosalsky in General Sessions to an indeterminate term of not more than three years in the penitentiary.

She was convicted of grand larceny March 12 in connection with the failure last fall of her firm with liabilities reported to be more than $450,000.

"Not a single dollar went into this woman's purse," said her attorney, Hugo Wintner, pleading for clemency. "Her troubles go back over a year, when her cashier robbed her of $104,000, and the district attorney's office has never indicted him. She kept on in her business, taking new customers' money to pay old debts. Her mistake was one of judgment."

tion asking dissolution of the restraining order.

Thus the taxi strike war, entering its tenth week, shifted back to court today.

HEARING MONDAY

The injunction issued by Judge Cohen was a preliminary one, effective for five days. The judge has set next Monday for a hearing on whether the order shall be made permanent.

Refusing to come to terms with the Parmelee Company, the striking drivers, as a move to fight the company, had started operation of their own cab service Monday, using ordinary automobile sedans. They had announced that they intended to put 75 cars into service and that the proceeds would go to the strike relief fund.

A special squad of police was assigned today to Liberty avenue, near the union cab headquarters, to prevent drivers from parking in the street. Siford claimed the headquarters was receiving calls for union cabs at the rate of 50 an hour.

Taxi companies made no effort to extend operations today, the second day of renewed cab service.

Thirty taxis were again placed in operation in the downtown sector, running between the railroad stations and hotels without a single act of violence or interference on the part of strike sympathizers.

TAFT'S LETTER 'FROM GRAVE' AIDS DRYS

Prohibition Results Termed 'Glorious'; Benefits Cited By Salvation Army Chief

patience. The habits of an important section of a congested part of the country cannot be changed overnight or in years. The reform and the adaptation of society to that at which the amendment aims must be gradual. The temptation of corruption will drag it out.

HOOVER ELECTION VIEW

"While looking ahead at the amendment I despaired of any success. I really think that it is possible, if we keep at it, to achieve a satisfactory result. The persistence with which the people maintain in Congress a two-thirds majority in both Houses gives me much hope, and I am inclined to think that this will wear down the moderate wets to a consciousness that the only scolution is pressure in favor of enforcement.

"I see that the wets claim that the election was not a prohibition victory. Well, one cannot argue with that view, and can only let those who believe it continue to believe it."

Letters in which Mr. Taft opposed adoption of constitutional prohibition and predicted that the law could not be enforced were referred to by anti-prohibitionists during the House committee's hearings on bills to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment. The only inkling of any change in views of Mr. Taft was given by Mrs. Ruth Strawbridge, Philadelphia society matron, who testified for the drys while the chief justice was lying critically ill at his home, that he advised her to induce Philadelphia society women to abolish the custom of serving drinks at functions.

DRY RESULTS '50-50'

Pressed by Representative La Guardia, Prof. Taft said the gain and loss from prohibition "is about 50-50, but conditions are improving.

Representative Stobbs (Rep.), of Massachusetts, asked Taft how far the prophecy of the late Chief Justice that prohibition could not be enforced, was realized.

"I have no objection in answering," said Taft. "I have talked it over with my brother and he agreed that it had done a great deal of good and a great deal of harm, but that the good could be increased and the harm reduced if the people got together."

The statement of Commander Booth defending prohibition was read by Col. Walter F. Jenkins, of New York, ex-national secretary of the Salvation Army. Miss Booth could not appear because of illness.

"That the strata of society formerly most adversely affected by the drinking customs which obtained under the old license laws," said Miss Booth's statement, "is most decidedly improved is the burden of the uniform testimony of our officers throughout the Union.

"Social loss and wreckage is immeasurably easier with drink than without it and restoration to paths of virtue is a much simpler problem now that drink is banished."

"The whisky soak" type which the army formerly dealt with is almost extinct.

AUTOS BLAMED FOR VICE

The Army has less difficulty housing 4,800 men in its hotel in New York on the Bowery, than it did housing 600 in the same place before prohibition. Men are better behaved, she said.

Whatever the future of the prohibition law, she said that the Salvation Army must be unalterably opposed to the liquor traffic.

Representative La Guardia pointed to the increase in the army's rescue work, but Col. Jenkins insisted that prohibition was not the cause. The automobile is the great cause of girls' downfall, he said.

Representative Celler remarked that arrests for drunkenness increased from 20,443 in 1920 to $60,395 in 1928 in Philadelphia. Col. Jenkins asserted that the explanation may be that drunks were not picked up so often before prohibition.

Co-Eds Capture Escaped Monkey In Dormitory

MADISON, Wis., March 19.—(AP.)—The monkey that escaped Sunday from the University of Wisconsin zoology department has been captured, not by the posses organized especially for that purpose, but by five co-eds.

For two days the monkey search was the talk of the campus. Law and engineering students were excused from classes, but found no trace of the animal.

Last night one of the members of the Arden Club awoke to find a hairy face peering at her. She screamed and five other co-eds, armed with golf clubs and canes, ran to her rescue. Surrounding the monkey, they got him on the bed, wrapped him up in the covers, and the monkey search was over.

She won a trip to Europe, where she met Charles Roderick Jordan, Paris representative of the United States Steel Corporation.

Mary was due back months ago. She didn't return. Instead, last October, she and Jordan were married.

At the Millnack home in Carnegie today a brother said Mary was planning to return for a visit within a few months.

G. O. P. CHIEF, HUSTON, TO QUIT

Stock Transactions Stir Congressmen; Grievances Are Carried to Hoover

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The resignation of Claudius H. Huston as chairman of the Republican National Committee probably will be submitted and accepted in the very near future, according to reports in usually reliable political quarters today.

Huston has been grilled by the Senate Lobby Committee for some days, and part of the records of his account with a New York brokerage firm were produced today under subpena by the committee.

Irrespective of the lobby investigation, agitation among senators and congressmen who are up for re-election this year for a change in the chairmanship is growing. Some of them are carrying their grievances direct to the White House.

CONFERS WITH HOOVER

President Hoover had a long conference with Chairman Huston some days ago. Huston denied then that he would resign. He was Hoover's personal choice for the job.

Since the White House interview, the Senate Investigating Committee has disclosed Huston's long connection with the lobby to turn Muscle Shoals over to commercial interests, and also has shown that technically he still is president of the Tennessee River Improvement Association, which he frankly admitted to the committee is "a sort of a lobbying organization."

Recalled to the stand today by the Lobby Committee after testimony had been given concerning $36,100 deposited to his account with Blyth and Bonner, New York Brokers, Huston said he had turned over the money to the Tennessee River Improvement Association.

The $36,100 was given Huston by the Union Carbide Company for the Improvement Association and it was deposited by Huston to his personal account.

TELLS OF STOCK DEAL

Charles A. Krickl, member of the brokerage firm, said that two checks had been deposited, one for $22,000 and one for $14,100 and that funds in the latter deposit had been used by Huston to buy stocks from which a profit of $526 was made.

The Republican chairman said he did not distinguish between personal and association deposits after he had paid out the money.

Funds belonging to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers also had gone into the brokerage account but that he had accounted for every cent of the money.

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Paul Brown, III, 17-year-old millionaire, died of pneumonia yesterday at the home of his mother, Mrs. Bess Masterson Brown, 75 Central Park West. Two years ago he inherited $1,180,000 from his grandfather, Paul Brown, St. Louis sportsman and broker, who died in Colorado.

Last Saturday he came home from Worcester Academy, Worcester, Mass., where he was a student, complaining of a boil on his neck. Infection set in and pneumonia developed.

New British Envoy Buys Sir Esme's Liquor

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Sir Ronald Lindsay, recently appointed British ambassador to the United States, succeeding Sir Esme Howard, reached here on the liner Aquitania last night, accompanied by Lady Lindsay. Fog held them over night at Quarantine.

Interviewed by reporters, he said he thought the biggest problems confronting him were those bearing on disarmament and the abolition of war.

The London naval conference, he said, had demonstrated the fundamental identity of British and American thought on "those basic questions, which somehow or other, must be solved before the future of our civilization can be considered fully guaranteed."

Asked whether he would follow his predecessor's policy in not importing liquor for consumption in the British embassy at Washington, he said:

"It's not fair to plunge me right into it. Whatever I do, I'll be criticized. I think it is only reasonable that I be allowed to look around first. I haven't made up my mind about that."

Sir Ronald, who is 6 feet 3 inches tall and looks like an athlete, said he was not a "teetotaler," but that he "came from a family of teetotalers."

"Before I left England," he added, "I bought the remainder of Sir Esme's stock."

Rockefeller's Flowers Win First Prizes at Show

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., March 19.—(AP.)—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., has just received two comparatively simple honors but he is as happy over them as a small boy with a new red wagon.

Two of the aged oil magnate's entries in a flower show here, sponsored by a garden club of Halifax County, won first prizes yesterday.

Even the most widely publicized activity of Mr. Rockefeller—golfing—comes second to his love for flowers.

A large basket of double petunias, of deep magenta shade, won a blue ribbon, as did a pot of Easter lilies.

He also had entered a number of potted foliage plants and a beautiful flower boat. The floral craft's decks were of ageratum, its sides of daisies and its keel of sweet peas.

About the first thing Mr. Rockefeller does when he arrives at his winter home, the Casements, is to inspect his vast flower garden. He delights in displaying potted plants and delicate hothouse blooms to friends.

THRONGS HEAR POPE PROTEST AGAINST SOVIET CHURCH WAR

HYMNS SUNG BY RUSSIAN REFUGEES

20 Cardinals Accompany Pontiff to St. Peter's Church for Special Mass

VATICAN CITY, March 19.—(AP.)—Pope Pius XI entered St. Peter's Basilica, the largest church in Christendom, this forenoon and said a mass of protest and expiation for the religious persecution and the anti-religious movements in Russia.

A great crowd heard him and listened to a large choir of Russians, orthodox Greeks and Ruthenians chant Slavic hymns. The unexpected presence of the Russian Choir produced the most profound impression on the throng inside the basilica.

PRAY FOR RELIEF

The regular choir, composed of seminarians of many nations, first sang the "Miserere." Then after a pause, the Russian Choir chanted without accompaniment.

The pontiff entered St. Peter's shortly after 10 a. m. and received a tremendous ovation. A score of cardinals accompanied him, and while he was being vested at the foot of the altar, approached him one by one and kissed his ring. They then took seats in two rows facing down the nave.

His Holiness wore a white chasuble studded with gold. He recited the mass in an exceptionally clear voice, his "credo" being heard for a great distance. He was served by a deacon, a subdeacon and two assistants.

NOBLE GUARDS AT ALTAR

During the ceremony he stood at the altar—known as the Baldacchino—directly over the tomb of the martyred St. Peter. Its position enabled him to look out over the heads of the throng.

At the foot of the altar there stood a platoon of noble guards, with helmets, heavy blue tunics and light blue trousers. Near the altar was a tribune of the diplomatic corps facing the throne chair placed at the foot of the altar for the pontiff.

Many plain clothes men circulated around the cathedral to preclude any incident. The cathedral doors were closed after the Pope entered.

Atheists in Demonstrations: Anti-God Parley Tomorrow

MOSCOW, March 19.—(AP.)—Coincident with religious services abroad for the welfare of Russia's millions of Christians, Soviet workers and atheistic groups participated in anti-religious meetings and demonstrations in various parts of the Soviet union today.

At the same time, several thousand members of the Society of Militant Atheists were preparing for the opening of the anti-God Congress tomorrow. Tonight many thousands of anti-religionists will conduct an attack against the Pope at the Moscow planetarium.

Today's newspapers are unrestrained in their denunciation of the Pope for leading the world-wide prayer movement against the Soviet union.

"Behind this movement," says an editorial in the official Pravda, "stand the predatory imperialist vultures who are preparing another world war. The Pope's prayers are nothing except a prelude to foreign interference in internal affairs of the Soviet union."

Pittsburgh Diocese Protests Soviet Razing of Churches

Hundreds of thousands of prayers, in Roman Catholic churches, convents, monasteries and homes in the Pittsburgh district today are being offered that the persecutions of religion and the razing of churches be halted in Russia.

At the chapel at Mt. Mercy College, Fifth avenue, the exposition of the Blessed Sacrament continued througout the day. The sermons and services tonight will also include reference to the brief.

Anti-Religious Campaign Will Be Extended to U. S.

BERLIN, March 19.—(AP.)—Communists were charged today with attacks on church edifices in Berlin during the night.

A large illuminated Bible text over the door of a Protestant church in North Berlin was smashed, and a Catholic church was daubed with huge red paint inscriptions deriding religion.

It was said here in dispatches from Moscow that the anti-religious campaign would be extended to America.

HOWAT OUSTED AS MINE HEAD IN KANSAS

Action Based on Activity In Calling Rebel Meeting; Union Charter Revoked

INDIANAPOLIS, March 19.—Alexander Howat, president of Kansas District 14, United Mine Workers of America, was ousted from his position and the Kansas union charter was revoked by the union miners' convention here today. A provisional government in District 14 will be set up.

FAGAN LEADS FIGHT

The drastic action, voted unanimously, came in a resolution read by Patrick T. Fagan, Pittsburgh, president of District No. 5. The resolution was drawn by the resolutions committee of which Fagan is chairman.

The action was based on Howat's action at the Springfield rebels' convention last week and on a letter he sent to all union locals in Kansas urging them to send delegates to the rebel convention.

Howat last week was elected president of the rebel "United Mine Workers of America." His letter to the Kansas local, besides urging every Kansas local to send delegates to the rump convention, offered to pay $20 of the expenses of each delegate.

The action removes Howat from the district presidency but does not expel him from membership. He is one of several insurgent leaders who, by action of the convention yesterday, were requested to appear before the union's international board here Tuesday to show cause why they should not be expelled from union membership.

TURMOIL ON FLOOR

The convention was thrown into turmoil as the constitution committee failed to concur in resolution favoring election of organizers and field workers.

Delegate Thomas F. Hanon, Ashland, Pa., lead the attack on the appointive power of International President John L. Lewis in chosing organizers.

The convention today also passed a resolution condemning a nation-wide move for the 45-year age limit for workers in many industries.

RACY BOOKS CENSORSHIP TO JURIES

Senate Reaches Compromise; Tariff Bill Nears Vote With Passage Forecast

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The administration's billion-dollar tariff bill, which President Hoover pledged to the nation 18 months ago, neared a final vote in the Senate today after seven months of partisan warfare.

An agreement was made to limit debate on all remaining amendments except those involving oil, lumber, silver and an anti-monopoly proposal by Senator Norris, (Rep.), of Nebraska.

Administration leaders were hopeful of completing the measure within 48 hours. The bill then will go to conference to iron out differences between the House and Senate.

This was the outlook following a division on federal censorship of imported literature after a two-day debate that at times rocked the chamber and galleries with laughter.

COMPROMISE EFFECTED

The censorship battle ended in a compromise by which customs inspectors can seize allegedly obscene books, but must take their cases into the federal courts for a decision by a jury before the volumes can be barred. All penalties for importing obscene literature were eliminated.

A score of obscene books were shown to the Senate by Senator Reed Smoot (Rep.), of Utah., who led the fight for an absolute censorship.

Smoot declared he would rather have his son eat opium than read the "vile, filthy books" seized in the past by customs inspectors. He relied chiefly upon D. H. Lawrence's "Lady Chatterly's Lover" as his exhibit of "obscene literature."

Against Smoot's array of naughty books, Senator Bronson Cutting (Rep.), of New Mexico, charged Shakespeare with writing obscene passages into his classics. Cutting also declared the Bible would be barred from the country if wholesale censorship were imposed.

BOTH SIDES PLEASED

In the end, the Senate adopted a half-way attitude, pleasing both groups. Censorship was retained, but the old form abandoned. In the future, if the House agrees, the federal courts and juries of American citizens will pass upon naughty books.

The oil fight held just as much interest for the Senate, although it brought that body back to economic problems. The two Oklahoma senators—Pine and Thomas—proposed duties of 80 cents per barrel on crude petroleum and 40 per cent ad valorem on gasoline. They declared this protection was necessary to save the oil industry from ruin at the hands of importing companies. Opponents of the duties charged they would add $900,000,000 a year to the cost of motoring.

There appeared little likelihood of the duties being adopted, although a compromise arrangement may be agreed upon, limiting the protection to a few years and using the revenue for building new roads.

Europe, both from her allies and Germany, beyond what was needed to pay her own debts in America, and by the Balfour declaration of British policy in Palestine, which set that country aside as a home for repatriated Jews.

DEATH GRIEVES KING

Death of the earl caused grief throughout the nation. King George, who had regarded Balfour as one of his most trusted friends and advisers, immediately sent the following message to the dead statesman's family:

"I shall treasure Lord Balfour's memory as a lifelong friend. His was a great and charming personality, and a wise and trusted counselor."

Prime Minister MacDonald informed almost at once of the Earl's death, declared:

"It is the end of a long useful life and the whole nation will unite in expressing its regret and in paying its tribute."

It was announced that funeral services would be held at Balfour's country place, Scotland, on Saturday.

The earl was 81 years old last July and he played tennis right up to that birthday. A most notable characteristic was an almost unlimited capacity to remember. He frequently astonished friends with recollections of the most trivial incidents in his long career.

Arthur James Balfour was created the first Earl of Balfour in 1922, and holds besides the title, Viscount Traprain of Whittinghame.

WRITE AUTOBIOGRAPHY

When the end came Lord Balfour was writing the finishing pages of his autobiography in which will be revealed the thoughts and opinions of the scholar all the world once knew as "A. J.".

The Earl of Balfour is succeeded by his brother, Gerald, at whose house he died. Lord Balfour was created an earl and Viscount Traprain after the Washington conference in 1921 and 1922. He also was made a Knight of the Garter, but seldom afterwards appeared in public roles.

He was president of the British Academy from 1921 to 1928 but his time was given largely to his autobiography.

YOUNG ASSAILS BANK CHAINS

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP.)—Governor Roy A. Young, of the Federal Reserve Board, today told the House Banking Committee that fully one-sixth of the total banking resources of the country were tied up in group or chain banking systems.

At the end of 1929, Young said, there were 25,648 banks and 3,547 branches, or a total of 28,192 banking offices, with loans and investments totaling $58,500,000,000. Of these offices, he said, 6,353 were included in some branch group or chain system, with loans and investments of $30,000,000,000.

"From this, it will be seen," he added, "that more than half the total loans and investments of the country's banks are held in group, chain or branch systems."

Trees Uprooted, Field Flooded By Waterspout

SANTA ANA, Cal., March 19. (INS.)—But slight damage was reported today from the waterspout-tornado which swept in from the sea, a distance of eight miles, and broke up on a row of trees bordering the Martin Airport at the edge of the city.

The waterspout jumped from the sea near Huntington Beach and roared inland, uprooting brush and trees in its path. Damage was slight as the freak storm crossed vacant farm lands.

When the storm hit the row of trees near the airport it let loose a blanket of water which flooded the field to a depth of more than a foot.

LINER EUROPA SPEEDS TO U.S.

BREMEN, Germany, March 19.—(INS.)—Bidding for the speed supremacy of the Seven Seas, the mammoth new North German Lloyd liner Europa left here at 1 o'clock this afternoon (7 a. m. eastern standard time) on her maiden voyage across the Atlantic Ocean.

The graceful 49,746-ton vessel, sister ship of the North German Lloyd liner Bremen, 51,565 tons, present holder of the coveted "blue ribbon" of the Atlantic, was cheered by a crowd of 10,000 persons as she pulled away from her pier here.

Before her triumphant departure today, the Europa went through several misfortunes. She was launched in August, 1928, but eight months later, when her fitting had nearly been completed, she was swept by a fire which caused extremely heavy damage.

Undaunted, her owners immediately set to work to refit her. She was launched for the second time in July, 1929. On her first trial trip she ran on to a mud bank, but was pulled off safely by tugs.

DE RIVERA GETS ROYAL HOMAGE

MADRID, March 19.—(AP.)—Spain's "benevolent dictator," as former Premier Primo de Rivera was often called, was buried in a modest grave in the family plot at San Isidro Cemetery today with the highest of funeral honors that King Alfonso and the Berenguer government could give.

Great crowds, massed in all directions as the solemn cortege passed, cheered for the King and Spain, in contrast to recent republican demonstrations.

The monarch attended mass in the railroad station chapel where Primo rested in state, but did not march behind the caisson which carried the coffin to its last resting place. Don Fernando Bourbon, a cousin, followed the coffin as a representative of His Majesty.

Marching behind were members of the Berenguer cabinet, foreign diplomats and highest officials of the nation, all afoot.

As the national anthem thrilled out, distant batteries fired a 21-gun salute. Army airplanes flew above the troop-lined route to the cemetery and all the honors were paid in accordance with the former premier's full rank of captain-general.

Houdini's Wife Abandons Hope for Spirit Message

MIAMI, Fla., March 19.—(AP.)—Mrs. Harry Houdini, widow of the internationally known magician, said she had abandoned hope of communicating with her husband in the spirit world.

She said that for three years she had sought to penetrate beyond the grave and communicate with her husband, but now has renounced faith in such a possibility.

"I hoped and prayed and worked to get a message from Houdini," she said, "and several of the great spiritualistic advocates declare I have succeeded. But it is not true. The silence is impenetrable. There is only a void.

"If I had succeeded in communicating with Houdini I would shout it from the housetops, and I would carry a message of hope to all burdened souls, but I have none. There is nothing there."

When Houdini died, Mrs. Houdini announced that she and her husband had formed a pact by which he was to communicate with her, if possible, from the spirit world. Numerous attempts to convince Mrs. Houdini that her husband was communicating through a medium, were made, she said, but she steadfastly denied that any of the mediums presented the clue by which she was to recognize a legitimate message.

Beauty Winners in Clash Over Journey to Rio

HAVANA, March 19.—(AP.)—Two of the fair participants in the recent beauty contest at Miami, Fla., found themselves engaged in warfare over the question who will represent the United States in the international beauty pageant at Rio Janeiro next September.

In one camp is Miss Janet Eastment, pretty 20-year-old blonde from Fort Worth, Texas, who was chosen as "America's Sweetheart" at Miami. In the other is Miss Beatrice Lee, pretty 17-year-old blonde from Salt Lake City, who was "Miss Utah" at Miami.

Information gathered in the trenches occupied by "America's Sweetheart" was that the trip to Rio was one of the prizes accruing to the winner of the Miami title.

However, Gaston Andrade, manager of the Latin-America division of the Miami show, said he had full authority from the South American pageant officials to select whomsoever he chooses to represent the United States and his selection is "Miss Utah."

"She was the pick of my 10 Latin-America girls at Miami," he added.

So the battle rages, with the $10,000 Rio prize at stake. "Miss Utah" said she was "most certainly going," and "America's Sweetheart" declared she was "looking forward with pleasure to the trip to South America."

The girls are here with their chaperones on a pleasure trip.

"Yes, sir."

"Do you know if you fire a gun or point it at a vital part of the body you are apt to kill a person?"

"Yes, I know it will kill them."

"Did you stand watch Paul after you had fired at him?"

"He was backing up to the telephone pole and I turned and started back. He shot at me, too, when he was backing up."

FOUR FEET AWAY

"At the time you say you fired the shot how far do you say you were from the rear of the car?"

"Not more than four feet."

"After you say you shot at Paul, aimed at his chest and fired, then the only shot that was fired after that was by Paul?"

"It was."

"The only shot you fired at Paul then was the one you speak of?"

"Yes, sir."

"And that shot was aimed at his chest?"

"It was."

"And you were within thre or four feet from him?"

"I was."

"While in that position did you hit him in the chest?"

"I don't know whether I hit him or not."

"Did he make any move?"

"He just kept backing up."

"You are sure that was the only shot you fired?"

"It is."

"How far did you follow him down the road after you fired at him?"

"Twelve or 15 feet."

And did you shoot again?"

"I did not."

SHOT HALTED ADVANCE

"What made you stop following him?"

"He shot at me. He backed up a ways then, and I turned and went back."

"As he was backing up 12 or 15 feet did you have your gun pointed at him?"

"In his direction."

"Where was his right hand?"

"He had his gun in it."

"Towards you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Isn't it a fact that after he had backed up 10 or 12 feet you fired at him again?"

"I did not."

At this afternoon's session, Margiotti took Irene back over testimony she gave under direct examination.

"You had your second child in a hospital in Statesville, N. C.?"

"Yes."

"And you were registered as Vera Wilson?"

"Yes."

NO MONEY TO EAT

"When you got in Butler, did you have any money?"

"Yes."

"Did Dague have any?"

"Yes."

"Well, how much money did you have?"

"I don't know."

"After you left New Castle, did you stop any place to eat before you got to Wheeling?"

"No."

"Did you go along any main highways or pass through the main streets of any cities?"

"No, I don't think so."

"Was that because you were afraid you would be seen and recognized?"

"I never thought of police. Maybe Glenn did, he was driving."

"Well, didn't all of you talk about getting away from the police?"

"No."

"Didn't you know you would be arrested if the police saw you?"

"No. Maybe if I was driving I would have, but Glenn did the driving."

"You say you picked up hikers along the highway?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Well, they wanted a lift."

"Wasn't it because you wanted to have more than three people in the car to mislead police?"

"No."

"Do you took the Horton car from New Castle to the island at Wheeling and put it in the garage? Did you take the plates from the other car in the garage and take Horton's car to Parkersburg?"

DAGUE CHANGED PLATES

"No, we changed plates before we got to Wheeling."

"Where did you get the other plates?"

"From a car along the road."

"Why did you do that?"

"I didn't do it. Glenn changed the plates."

"But you helped him?"

"Yes."

"Well, why?"

"I don't know. Glenn just did it."

"Wasn't it because you knew police had the number of Horton's car?"

"I don't know."

"Where did you get this Chrysler car you took to Arizona?"

"In a garage in Parkersburg."

"Whose garage?"

"I don't know."

"Did you say in your newspaper story that it was a part of the system to change your plates often so that you could escape?"

"No."

"Did you say you took out the Chevrolet and started for Butler and that Glenn said we might as well get all the money we can in a hurry?"

"No."

LIKED BOY'S CLOTHES

"Did you say that when you tied up the old man, he asked you to take his false teeth out before you gagged him?"

"I may have."

"Did you say that it was then that you invented those tricks to outwit police and which got you safely to Arizona? 'We saw two men near Wheeling, and they don't know how glad we were when they sat up front.' Did you say that?"

"No."

"Why did you put on boy's clothes?"

"Well, I always wanted to wear boys' clothes."

"Did you ever wear them before?"

"Yes, once or twice."

"Before you put those clothes on in St. Louis, hadn't you read the newspapers?"

"No."

"Didn't you read the newspapers in the library in St. Louis?"

"Yes."

"And then when you knew they were looking for a blonde girl you put those boy's clothes on?"

"Yes."

WANTED TO GO WEST

Throughout the questioning Margiotti asked her whether the changing of plates, changing of clothes, meant that she knew the police were looking for them for the shooting of Brady Paul, but she always answered "No, I didn't think much about it."

"Why were you going westward when you left Parkersburg?"

"I don't know how to answer."

"You can't answer it?"

"Well, I don't know—I always did want to go West."

"Now, I want to show you a map. Ever see it before?"

"I don't know whether that is the map. We had one like it."

"Did you look at the map?"

"Oh yes, all along the road."

"Where were you going?"

"We had no particular place to go to."

"You had heard of your husband being in Pittsburgh, California?"

"Yes, but that was a year ago."

"Yuma?"

"Yes, Glenn did say he wanted to get a job on a ranch."

CONFRONTED BY VICTIMS

A dozen or more victims of alleged holdups by Irene, called from among those attending the trial, were paraded before the defendant at the opening of the tenth day of the trial today.

"Have you ever seen this man?" Margiotti invariably asked.

Usually Irene's answer was in the affirmative.

"Did you have a gun when you held him up?" Margiotti thundered.

"Yes."

"Was it the same gun you had on the Butler road?"

"Yes."

DISPLAYS NERVOUSNESS

Irene gazed upon the faces of victims from Pittsburgh, Greensburg, Uniontown, Toledo and Cincinnati. She faced the first few brazenly, then as they continued to come in almost endless lines her hands worked nervously at a pocketbook she carried. Her eyes shifted nervously from prosecutor to victim to jury.

Irene testified today that she last saw her brother, Tom Crawford, the night of the day on which Paul was shot, in Wheeling, W. Va.

"And you haven't seen or heard from him since?"

"No—not since he left us in Wheeling."

'Death Ray' Discovered; Has Curative Value

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—(AP.)—Discovery of a new short length wave, that may easily be developed into a death ray, but also may have great curative properties was announced here last night by E. L. Manning, of the General Electric Company's research laboratories.

Speaking before the Engineers' Club of Philadelphia, Mr. Manning said:

"We have learned to build vacuum tubes which will broadcast such a short length wave that people in the neighborhood will have their blood temperatures raised. This means that we can produce artificial fever, and hold it under control, within any limits we choose."

Manning stated that if natural fever was "an attempt on the part of the body to kill off bacteria that attack it, as is believed, this new discovery may prove of startling value in the treatment of disease."

The ray, Manning said, could easily be used to induce such a high fever in human beings that it would result in death. He said experiments had been made with rabbits.

ENVOY RIGHTS CURB SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP.)—A bill to strip foreign diplomats of their immunity under American law was introduced today by Senator McKellar (Dem.), of Tennessee, while police officials were investigating the latest instance of injury to a Washington resident by a diplomat-driven automobile.

The case now under investigation is one of several which are recorded in police files. No prosecution now is possible in such cases.

The driver in the most recent accident was Commander Juan Polich, of the Chilean Embassy. Paul Edward Hammond, a railway clerk, lies seriously hurt as a result of the accident. Witnesses said the diplomat's car drove through a red traffic light just before it struck the car driven by Hammond.

Diplomatic immunity has been widely discussed also in connection with the prohibition laws.

"Foreign envoys ought to ask to be treated just exactly like American citizens," said McKellar.

U. S.-ENGLISH SPLIT DENIED

LONDON, March 19.—(AP.)—Without specifying the source of its information, the London Daily Express today said naval conference circles were greatly excited at reports of a sudden breach of harmony developing from disagreement of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson.

The story is that when the chief delegates met Monday at 10 Downing street, the British premier took Col. Stimson to task for allowing a misleading impression to spread that Japan was ready to accept an American offer to adjust their naval strength differences. It was understood the offer had been cabled Tokio.

A spokesman for the American delegation today characterized the Express story as "simply foolish."

Premier MacDonald especially instructed the British spokesman to deny the story also. The spokesman, in behalf of the Premier said:

"The report is absolutely and gratuitously false."

BREAK IN MAIN INJURES FIVE

SAN FRANCISCO, March 19.—(INS.)—Five persons were injured, two houses were burned and the pavement in an entire block was undermined as the result of a bursting water main, a check disclosed here today.

When the water main, a 16-inch pipe line supplying two swimming pools, burst in the Richmond district an avalanche of water roared down beneath the street, causing the pavement to collapse and bursting gas mains. Gas explosions ignited two houses.

A number of automobiles were trapped by a wall of mud which was forced in front of the cascading water.

Mrs. Henry A. Gerdes was the most seriously injured. As the result of a gas explosion in her home, one of her legs was broken.

The flood and resultant fires caused damage estimated at $100,000.

DRIVE ON DOPE RINGS URGED

By KENNETH CLARK.
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Capture the big traffickers. Dam up the major sources of supply of the big dope rings.

These positive instructions were sent to federal narcotic agents by Harry J. Anslinger, assistant prohibition commissioner, who is acting narcotics chief.

They are part of the government's new policy to protect thousands of Americans from the misery and degradation of dope addiction.

APPEAL TO STATES

The states are being asked to handle the smaller violations, leaving the government with more opportunity to smash the gigantic rings that are flooding the country with dope. The customs service is participating vigorously. Customs barriers at the ports and borders are being strengthened.

It is Anslinger's belief that with the Federal authorities concentrating on the powerful rings, much can be accomplished to curb the dope menace.

Aside from shifting numerous agents in various parts of the country in an effort to revitalize enforcement, Anslinger, in the three weeks he has been in charge, has accomplished several sweeping administrative reforms.

SEIZURES CHECKED

There is to be no more "padding" of narcotic records, agents are held strictly accountable for all seized drugs, and agents in charge are required to submit regular reports of conditions in their territory on diversions of legal supplies, interstate illicit traffic, smuggling, and the source of seizures. This will afford a comprehensive view of the chief sore spots, with a view to their elimination.

CANCER STUDY ENCOURAGED

By GOBIND BEHARI LAL.
Universal Service.

CHICAGO, March 19.—Doctors Walter Bernard Coffey and John Davis Humber, noted for their anti-cancer experimental treatments, arrived here from New York, and after a few hours of conference with friends they were scheduled to leave Chicago immediately for Los Angeles.

At the Hotel Blackstone, Doctors Coffey and Humber said that their trip to the East, their visit in Washington, D. C., and New York, had been most satisfactory to them.

Certain important developments in their experimental work will be initiated by these doctors on their return to San Francisco and Los Angeles, as an immediate result of their close conference and interchange of views with some of the foremost cancer specialists of this country, who are in New York, Washington, Baltimore and other cities.

The nature of these newer aspects of the anti-cancer research will be revealed later on, Drs. Coffey and Humber said.

FATHER CURTIN HONORED

Curtin, pastor of St. James' Catholic Church of Sewickley. Father Curtin was the recipient of $1,200, the gift of the community, as well as another purse presented him by his congregation. The gathering was held in Guild Hall, a community house built largely through Father Curtin's efforts.

Burgess Oliver S. Richardson, the Rev. Dr. O. D. Ddell, pastor of the Sewickley Presbyterian Church, and Edward Ducey, member of St. James' Church extolled Father Curtin who replied. The Rev. Walter Reid, assistant rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, offered the invocation.

CHAPTER VIII.

I'LL always remember three days in my life — last Christmas Day and the two days after. The first was so calm and peaceful and nice for little Donnie, my poor baby. The other two were so dreadful, with all the shooting, and starting on our nightmare trip across America to where we were caught in Arizona.

We didn't have much money, in spite of all the risks we took to get some, but we had enough to buy a few presents for Ruby and Ray Schroeder, my sister and brother-in-law, in Bellaire, O., where we went for Christmas dinner.

Ruby and Ray didn't know, while we were sitting at their table, laughing and talking and eating turkey, what was in the backs of our minds. But Glenn and I decided that we would take this one day off from our worries, and act natural, not like people that had stolen money and might be arrested.

On Christmas Day

WHEN we got to Bellaire the turkey was all ready, but Donnie was so tired we gave him a bone to hold and he fell asleep on the bed in the back room while he was gnawing it.

Then we sat down. Ruby and Ray were fine to Glenn and me. They must have known about how things were betwen us two, because they knew all about Glenn having a wife and two children over in Viola, W. Va. But they didn't say anything about it, but just let us feel good on Christmas Day.

We stuffed ourselves.

We got away around midnight and I'll never forget how Ruby stood in the door and waved and yelled: "Good luck."

Our good luck lasted just 24 hours more, and then the things happened in Butler that got us into this mess.

Gave Up the Money

WE GOT to Toledo early in the morning and had some coffee in a cafe near the gas station where we were going to get money. There's nothing to tell about how we did it in Toledo. It was the same way as the others. As soon as they saw the guns it was all over, and they gave up the money.

But afterwards I made the fool mistake that got us identified and it shows what a poor criminal I was. It was part of the system to change cars as often as possible, so we couldn't be tracked by the make of car or license number. So we took a Pontiac we found parked on the road, and left our Chrysler there.

That was a pretty good trade. The fellow whose car we got hasn't anything to complain about. But it was the police who got the Chrysler, not the owner of the Pontiac. We didn't mean that to happen.

And then I felt around in my clothes and told Glenn:

"Honey, I'm such a fool. I left my purse in the Chrysler."

"Did it have anything in it to identify you?" Glenn asked.

He was worried, but so kind he didn't scold me for being a fool, but just said: "It's too late to go back now. Let's hope they don't find anything connected with us in the purse."

I DIDN'T tell Glenn then, but I knew that the purse had a picture of my brother Tom in it. I carried that picture because I was proud of Tom Crawford. He was in aviation in the war and served six years at Wilbur Wright Field in Dayton. The picture was of him in uniform. I could only hope it wouldn't be seen by someone who knew him. But it was. A newspaperman in Wheeling saw it and said it was Tom, and then they put two and two together and knew who the "blonde gun girl" was they were after.

We got back to Wheeling in the Toledo Pontiac and put it up in the Island. Then we took out the Chevrolet that Glenn had in there and started for Butler. Glenn said we might as well get as much money as we could in a hurry, because it would get harder and harder to do it and not get caught.

Back Room of Value

WE GOT to Butler about dark and went to the hotel and put Donnie to bed. Then we went out for a walk to look over the F. H. Butler chain store up in North Main street, that we intended to visit. Glenn laughed and pointed out to me:

"Look, honey, the store is nearly catty-corner across from the police station."

The police station had signs—"Police" and "Mayor's Office"—on the front, and I said:

"I bet they would like to know in there what's going to happen tomorrow morning."

We saw that the store where we tied up Wish Angert had a back room and that was all that we needed to know.

Unlucky December 27 came and we slept pretty late.

We watched Wish Angert's store from 8 o'clock until nearly noon, before Glenn said:

"The business is slack now. Let's go."

Baby a Problem

I COULD hear the motor of the Chevrolet outside in the side street and worried for fear Donnie would monkey with the machinery. That always worried me. It was a risk taking Donnie along on these things, but we swore he would never leave us, for fear we'd get in a jam and have to leave the country quick and wouldn't have my darling baby with us.

Just then we heard a customer in the front. He was rapping with a quarter on the counter for service. I went out and said:

"What is it, please?"

He was an old man and wanted butter. I began to fuss around, and when h looked up he was seeing a gun. He went back into the other room without trouble. We tied him up, too. Before we put the handkerchief in his mouth he said:

"Please take my false teeth out. They'll bother me."

So I did, and put the handkerchief in carefully, and we got away toward New Castle.

(Editor's Note: Manager Wish Angert's cleverness in noting that the robber pair's parked car motor had a "Chevrolet horn" decided Irene's and Dague's downfall. He gasped "Chevrolet!" to his liberators and the roads were being watched for a couple in that make of car within ten minutes after the crime.)

I already told how we had the fight with Corporal Paul and his partner when we were getting away.

SANTIAGO, Chile, March 19.—(INS.)—Three persons were dead and property valued at more than $1,000,000, including an American-owned electric power station, was destroyed today by a fire which wiped out a large section of the town of Puerto Montt, Southern Chile, a popular shore resort.

UNDERSEA TRIP WILKINS' NEXT

NEW YORK, March 19.—(INS.)—Under the Arctic ice by submarine from Spitzenbergen to Alaska!

That is the next adventure planned by Sir Hubert George Wilkins, internationally famous explorer, who returned to New York today from his Antarctic expedition.

His exploits have been briefly reported by radio, and today he told the thrilling story in more detail.

Summarized, Sir Hubert's accomplishments on the Antarctic trip included:

Discovery of seas where the Antarctic continent had been charted on maps heretofore.

Discovery of five new Antarctic islands, as yet unnamed.

Discovery of the fact that Charcotland, believed to have been a peninsula, is an island, a fact that pushes the heretofore accepted coast line of Antarctica back eight full degrees of latitude, and remakes the old accepted coast line completely for 1,200 miles.

Discovery that no life exists in the frozen South Pole zones except bird life and seals—unlike the Arctic regions.

"I intend to complete my maps and report the discoveries to the American Geographical Society today," Capt. Wilkins said, "and continue submitting of our proofs until they have all the required data."

Woman Printer Dies, Hidden Cash Found

WILMINGTON, Del., March 19.—(AP.)—For 30 years, Miss Fannie Hurlock worked in the composing room of the Wilmington Every-Evening. When she died last week, at the age of 67, she was believed to have been poor. Search of her room showed she was worth $15,000. Stuffed in stockings was $1,100, more cash was found in hiding elsewhere and books showed balances in four banks.

SEARCH SHIPS FOR 'DOPE'

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Believing a tip that the French liner, France, carried $633,000 worth of narcotics was a blind to divert suspicion from other liners, federal agents today were prepared to search 21 ships due here from Europe this week.

More than 100 Federal Narcotic Bureau operatives, who searched the France for the shipment they had been informed was to be brought in on that liner, found nothing.

Orders from Washington also were issued for the search of vessels making port at Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore. Canadian authorities were notified to be on the lookout for the shipment on ships touching at Halifax and St. Lawrence River ports.

New 'Chute Record Claimed by German

CASSEL, Germany, March 19.—(AP.)—Air Pilot Resch, of Wuerzburg, today claimed a record parachute descent of 5,200 meters (approximately 17,333 feet). The previous record was said to be 4,500 meters. Resch ascended with Gerhard Fieseler, stunt flier, in a sporting plane and jumped from a wing. The parachute caught in a tree, but Resch was not hurt.

WOMAN TRIED IN 'OUIJA' MURDER

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 19.—(AP.)—Lila Jimerson, Seneca Indian, charged with murder in connection with the hammer murder of Mrs. Clothilde Marchand, artist's wife, went on trial today in Erie County Court.

Nancy Bowen, aged Indian woman, accused of the actual slaying at the instigation of the younger Lila, was not immediately placed on trial. Plans call for the hearing of her case later.

The state's two leading witnesses against the Jimerson woman, who is 35 years old, are Henri Marchand, famous Buffalo Science-Museum artist, whose wife was the victim of the weird "ouija board" conspiracy, and Mrs. Bowen, who has not denied she beat and choked Mrs. Marchand to death at the latter's home March 6.

According to Mrs. Bowen, Lila, madly in love with Marchand and hoping to marry him, interpreted ouija board messages, purportedly from "Sassafras Charlie," Nancy's dead husband, stating that Mrs. Marchand was a witch and that unless she were slain she would kill the Indians.

100 INJURED IN HINDU RIOT

RANGOON, Burma, March 19.—(AP.)—More than 100 persons were injured today at a disturbance outside the courtroom wherein J. N. Sengupta, mayor of Calcutta, was being tried for sedition growing out of utterances made in support of Mahatma Gandhi's campaign of civil disobedience.

Thirty police were among those injured. The crowd outside the court room threw stones at police and the military was requisitioned to disperse them.

It was understood the trouble arose when an Indian leading a procession struck a policeman.

BORSAD, Bombay, India, March 19.—(AP.)—Mahatma Gandhi and his 78 devotees left here at dawn for Raas, continuing their march to Jalalpur, where the campaign of civil disobedience to the British government will be officially begun with production of salt in violation of the British monopoly.

RADIO PATENTS UNDER FIRE

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(INS.)—The Radio Corporation of America will furnish the Department of Justice with a list of all patents held on radio equipment, in connection with the investigation of that company as to alleged violations of the Sherman anti-trust act, it was learned today.

Sometime ago the Couzens Senatorial Committee asked John Lord O'Brien, assistant to the attorney general in charge of anti-trust matters, to submit a report as to what action was intended. At that time O'Brien expected to furnish the committee the status of the case within 30 days.

One of the principal factors involved is the holding of large numbers of patents on radio equipment, through which it has been claimed a virtual monopoly has been set up.

TRAINMAN DIES IN WRECK

CHICAGO, March 19 (AP)—A trainman was killed and a dozen passengers are suffering injuries following a wreck last night on the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, a mile south of Arlington Heights, Ill.

The dead man is Carl Kutzner, engineer of a northbound suburban train. His body was discovered under the wreckage of his locomotive.

Two passenger trains, one Chicago bound from Minneapolis, the other a suburban local, were derailed.

The Chicago-bound train struck a crane shovel that extended over the tracks from a tractor parked beside the right of way. The force of the collision sent the Chicago-bound train into the north-bound local, which was standing on the other track.

The New Alexandria volunteer fire department failed to halt the flames with chemicals and calls were sent to Blairsville, Latrobe and Greensburg for assistance. OPPOSE SCHOOL LABOR SURVEY

Dr. Louis K. Manley, dean of the school of business administration, University of Pittsburgh, in a communication to the Board of Public Education, asked aid of that body in studying the unemployment situation in Pittsburgh. He suggested that attendance officers of the board "take a generous sampling of the unemployment situation," which could be checked later for accuracy against the report of a census to determine feasibility of determining later the approximate amount of unemployment in the Pittsburgh district.

Doubt as to the wisdom and legality of the request was expressed by some members of the board, who voted to have it referred to Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of schools. Dr. Manley explained that school authorities in Philadelphia had aided in such a survey sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania. The board, after accepting the request, instructed Dr. Davidson to confer with Philadelphia school officials relative to the success of the plan in that city.

J. Rodgers McCreery, solicitor, told the board that he doubted the legality of complying with Dr. Manley's request, and Taylor Allderdice said he doubted the usefulness of the pla... Other members, among them N. R. Criss, vice president, said that if the plan could be worked out in connection with the school census there was reason to believe that it might p.ove beneficial.

Mrs. Mary J. Crowley characterized as "most unfair" a resolution of Frank E. Freese, stating that, "Beginning with the school year of 1930 no employe of the board be permitted to engage in work other than that which is required of him in connection with the board." I was referred to the committee on finance and administration.

$40,000 SEWER APPROVED

The councilmanic committee on Public Works yesterday approved the ordinance for the construction of the McDonough's Run drainage basin sewer. The cost will be $40,000. The city will pay approximately $13,000, the rest coming from Baldwin and Mt. Lebanon townships and from Dormont.

The members decided to withhold final approval pending a report from the City Solicitor on the status of the arrangements made by other municipalities to pay their share.

A proposal for the construction of a trunk sewer connecting Pittsburgh, Baldwin, Brentwood, West Homestead, Mifflin and Munhall was held over for a conference with the Director of Public Works. The city would be called upon to pay one half of the $300,000 total cost.

Woman Says World's Tonic Performed a Miracle in Her Case.

"When I think back and realize what a serious time I had last winter I wonder that I am still alive today. It seems to me that World's Tonic has done a miracle in my case," said an attractive woman to the World's Tonic druggist at Pittsburgh, Pa., a few days ago. "I was so sick that my people despaired of my life. I had all the indications of a complete breakdown. My stomach could not retain food most of the time, and at other times it swelled so that pressure on my heart made me almost faint. The little food I kept in my stomach would sour, and made me belch. Sometimes I vomited severely. Nothing I took appeared to have any effect on my liver, which was so sluggish that I was bilious all the day long, and when I stooped down and arose black spots appeared before my eyes and my head appeared to whirl around.

"With these discomforts I had severe pains in the top of my head and along my arms and shoulders—so severe that at times I had to go to bed on account of them. But this was of little use, for I could sleep only a little at a time, and in the morning I felt worse than I had before going to bed. This state of things continued for several months, and all of the time I felt myself growing weaker, so that I did not expect to stay with my family very long.

"When I had just about given up all hope I saw an advertisement of World's Tonic. It told of a woman who had suffered somewhat as I was suffering, and told how quickly this medicine had helped her. It looked to me like a message of hope, and I bought a bottle of the Tonic at once. I began to notice an improvement in about three days, and in two weeks' time I was so much better that people who knew me commented on the improvement. In about four weeks every pain had left me, my stomach was acting normally, and I slept fine. I have since gained in both strength and health, so that I feel as well as ever and daily give thanks that I found this new helpful medicine in time."

World's Tonic is daily publishing stories just as remarkable, many of them from people right around here, so that you can verify them for yourself. It is sold by Dow's, May's & Liggett's, Mayflower, and all other first class drug stores. (A-41)

GINGER VICTIMS PUT AT 370

ATLANTA, March 19.—(AP)—T. F. Sellers, director of the State Board of Health laboratories, said that 370 persons were reported in the Southern states as stricken with what he termed "jamaica ginger paralysis."

He said Tennessee authorities had advised him there were at least 300 known cases there. Information received at his office indicated 30 cases near Corbin, Ky., 30 near Meridian, Miss., and 10 cases in Georgia.

"In each case," Sellers said, "the paralysis has followed consumption of jamaica ginger as a beverage.

"Analysis so far made at the laboratories here have shown that the poisoning in the ginger—and it appears that the paralysis is the result of a toxic condition—is not a metal.

"Beyond this, we can not say anything. We expect to begin some experiments shortly on animals."

The paralysis, which first attracted attention in Oklahoma, where some 400 cases were reported, undoubtedly has stricken a greater number of persons than is known, Sellers said.

CUTTER TO AID U. S. YACHT

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 19.—(AP.)—The Coast Guard cutter Tamaroa left here late yesterday for Salina Cruz, Mexico, to render aid to the American yacht Bon Homme.

Conflicting reports concerning the Bon Homme and her party of 15 persons headed by Barton Sewell, Jr., of Los Angeles, her owner, were received following the storm of last week. The cutter Shawnee originally was ordered to go to her aid, but it later was announced that the yacht was safe in port at Salina Cruz.

Chief Boatswain Charles Lucas, commanding the Tamaroa, received orders to fuel to full capacity and proceed at once to the Mexican port to render aid to the vessel. The yacht, it was reported, was at anchor outside the breakwater at Salina Cruz in a disabled condition.

It was expected that it will take eight days' steaming to reach Salina Cruz, which is 1,860 miles from here.

The Bon Homme, a Diesel yacht of 57 net tons, is 80 feet long and has engines rated at 180 horsepower. She was built in 1927 at Solomons, Md., and was on her way from New York to Los Angeles.

Mouse Reveals Strange Theft Of Pills

WAYNESBURG, Pa., March 19.—Waynesburg lays claim to the first medical mouse when the body of a dead rodent cleared up a mystery which for three weeks had baffled Dr. H. C. Scott. On several occasions Dr. Scott found quantities of medical tablets on a shelf in his office. Because he had none of the tablets in his office, Scott was at a loss to know their source. After almost 1,000 of the tablets had been found at the same place, a dead mouse was found close by.

The tablets were traced to the office of another doctor, two floors below that of Dr. Scott.

Alliance Railroad Man Dies Suddenly

ALLIANCE, O., March 19.—H. G. Casper, 47, station agent at the Pennsylvania Railroad depot here, dropped dead while visiting relatives. He came here from Beaver Falls, Pa., a year ago. He was noted over the Pennsylvania system for his courtesy.

Ohio Miner Killed By Fall of Stone

MARTINS FERRY, O., March 19.—George Cosmo, 50, miner employed by the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, was killed by a fall of stone at the mine here last night.

MARIE AVOIDS HOLY LAND

BUCHAREST, Rumania, March 19.—(AP)—A telegram received from Palestine stated that Queen Marie of Rumania had abandoned her projected tour of the Holy Land on learning that the British government considered that the present disturbed situation there was unfavorable for such a visit.

The press department of the foreign ministry informed the Jewish Telegraphic Agency that the Queen still was in Cairo and that the ministry was unaware of any intervention on the part of the Palestine authorities.

From private sources the Jewish Telegraphic Agency learned that the British minister to Rumania had intervened, asking that the Palestine visit be given up because it might lead to demonstrations.

The Rumanian Zionist organization some time ago received a telegram from the Zionist executive in Jerusalem and from Palestine colonies of Rumanian Jews announcing that a festive reception was being planned for the Queen.

Queen Marie and Princess Ileana left Rumania February 21 for a 40-day trip through Palestine and Egypt. They traveled about Egypt early in March, and March 8 it was announced that they would return to Rumania March 28 aboard the steamer Dacia, which took them to Egypt.

Flier in Accident, Gen. Mitchell Aids Him

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., March 19.—Richard R. Feller, business man here, returned today from a hazardous airplane landing in his own plane at the home of Brig.-Gen. William Mitchell, formerly of the U. S. Army Air Service, at Middleburg, Va.

Feller was not injured but his plane was damaged, the wing tips being crumpled, the tires blown and the propellor broken. Gen and Mrs. Mitchell came to his aid.

POINCARE FAILS IN MONACO TILT

MONTE CARLO, March 19.—(AP.)—Reliable reports here said that former President Raymond Poincaire, of France, had failed to effect a settlement of the matrimonial differences of Prince Pierre and Princess Charlotte, of Monaco, which have been causing a political ferment in the little principality.

The case soon may come before the French judges in Paris, who act as the Monegasque Supreme Court.

Princess Charlotte, daughter of the reigning Prince Louis, is credited with intending to ask the court for a million francs (about $40,000) yearly for life as a condition to ceding her rights to the throne.

Her husband, Prince Pierre, is very popular with the people of the principality, who have espoused his cause, and his name has been mentioned in talk about the establishment of a republic as the best candidate for president.

M. Poincaire, in his private capacity as a lawyer, recently was asked to attempt to bring about a settlement between the couple.

"I had been lost. I thought I would never be found. Finally a kindly gentleman saw me wandering about the street and took me to his home. I heard him tell his wife to look in the Sun-Telegraph 'Lost and Found' ads and see if my owner had advertised for me. Glory be! she had. And so here I am—home again. MEXICAN ENVOY HELD IN PLOT

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Ignacio Moran, former Mexican ambassador to Germany, and for some time a political refugee from his native land, was arrested here and held in $2,500 bail by a United States commissioner for a hearing in removal proceedings to Arizona, where he is wanted for conspiracy to export arms and ammunition to Mexican rebels under Gen. Jose Escobar.

Moran's alleged attempt to get an airplane loaded with guns and ammunitions across the border from Douglas, Ariz., was described as a violation of the presidential edict of 1924 prohibiting the furnishing of all implements of warfare to contending factions of the Mexican republic. Fellow conspirators named in the indictment against Moran in Douglas were Gen. Escobar, Phillip M. Mohun, Gen. Marcelo Caraveo and Capt. R. H. Polk.

Federal agents here said Moran purchased an airplane from Glenn W. Brophy, of Phoenix, Ariz., loaded it with arms for the rebel forces, and had arranged for its flight to Juarez, Mexico, when the plan leaked out and the conspirators were forced to flee.

SEEKS CABINET IN POLAND

WARSAW, Poland, March 19.—(AP.)—Prof. Szymanski, who spent some time in the United States a quarter of a century ago and who now is president of the Senate, was entrusted with the task of forming a cabinet by President Moscicki.

He will seek to establish a government to succeed that of former Premier Bartel who resigned last week after his minister of labor had suffered a vote of censure in the Diet.

Prof. Szymanski is an oculist. He was mobilized for service in the Russo-Japanese war but instead went to the United States and worked for several years in Chicago. Later he went to Brazil where he established an eye clinic.

After the re-establishment of Poland as an independent nation, the University of Vilna invited him to take up a post on its medical faculty. He entered the Polish Senate in 1928 and became speaker. He is devoted to Marshal Pilsudski, noted Polish patriot.

HURT IN CAVEIN, SEEKS $50,000

Robert B. Smeltz, of McCandless Township, a welder, seeks $50,000 damages from the Harrison Construction Company, of Pittsburgh, in a suit filed in Federal Court. He claimed to have been injured when buried under dirt, stone and lumber by the cavein of a six-foot ditch on Shore street, North Side. The accident occurred, he said, on April 18, 1929.

The defendant concern was engaged in raising the level of the street and extending the sewer. The ditch, covered with planks, caved in when a truck passed over it, he charged. He claimed his right knee was fractured and his leg is now shorter than the left. He also cites other alleged injuries.

MELLON CHECK SUSPECT HELD

DETROIT, March 19.—(AP.)—John B. Gest, awaiting trial here, has confessed that he and another man plastered the United States from coast to coast with $100,000 in counterfeit travelers' checks against the Mellon National Bank of Pittsburgh.

This was announced by Ralph E. Baker, assistant prosecutor, who said that the other man is Joy Harper, now under arrest in Mexico City, and that a warrant will be asked here for Harper.

Gest's confession, as related by Baker, was that Harper, after Gest's release from jail in San Francisco a year ago, made the checks and traveled by motor car all the way to New York, cashing them along the route.

Harper went to Mexico to arrange for more counterfeits and Gest returned to Detroit where he spent his time cashing the few thousand dollars' worth which remained of the first batch. He was trapped three weeks ago through a gasoline station proprietor. He is held now under $50,000 bond.

Gest had a petcock in his automobile gasoline tank which was operated from the seat, whereby he could dump a supply of gasoline soon after its purchase. He would then buy a new supply and cash a new check at the next station.

SEEK RELEASE OF AMERICAN

MEXICO CITY, March 19.—(AP.)—The American Embassy requested the Mexican Government to make every effort to free J. E. Bristow, an oil operator of San Angelo, Tex., held prisoner by bandits near Tepic on the west coast of Mexico.

Bristow, according to information reaching the embassy, was captured several days ago while on an expedition into a wild section of the country still infested by bandits. The bandits' demand for ransom was said to be as high as $15,000.

Three Mexicans captured with Bristow also were said to be held.

The American consul at Mazatlan reported the case to the local authorities, and it is understood that efforts are being made by them to obtain Bristow's release.

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

THREE super productions will occupy the attention of listeners tonight.

They are the Mobiloil concert with Emilio de Gogorza as the headliner, Fanny Brice and Henry Burbig in a burlesque of "Samson and Delilah," and the inaugural of Coca Cola Sportcasts.

We anxiously await the Mobiloil program on WCAE at 8:30. Gogorza, Spanish baritone, has a voice of rare timbre and quality and is considered the dean of Spanish interpreters. His expression is good, too, and we will picture him vividly when he does the toreador song from "Carmen." Again we will enjoy "La Paloma" and "In Old Madrid."

Emilio de Gogorza

Those two comedians of the air are at it again in the Philco Hour. Fanny and Henry will do "Samson and Delilah" as it has never been done before—and how! If you relish burlesque twirl the dials to WJAS at 10.

Vincent Richards, the tennis star, will be interviewed by Grantland Rice in the first Coca Cola Sportcast, WCAE at 10:30.

The beautiful "Oh, Promise Me" will be sung by Paul Oliver on the 9:30 Palmolive Hour. Tosti's "Serenade" will be a soprano-contralto duet.

We liked the tempo of Van Heusen's program last week and we would recommend it to those who enjoy popular music well done.

Virginia Harmon, petite blonde soprano underwent a successful throat operation yesterday. On her way to the operating room she asked the surgeon if she would be out of the ether in time to hear Amos and Andy.

* * *

When she resumes singing in three weeks Virginia will be given an audition by a New York producer who heard her voice recently over KDKA.

R. L. R., Schenley Farms—The quartet heard in the Evening Altar program is comprised of Martha Eaton Brickman, soprano; Carolyn Hunt Mahaffey, contralto; Elmer A. Stephan, tenor, and Joseph Williams, bass. J. Wesley Linsenbigler is pianist.

PHONEY CALL

It is often necessary for announcers to check and double check on requests presumably coming from prominent persons. For instance Saturday night someone called WJAS and said, "This is James J. Davis speaking. Will you have Jim Hughes sing 'The Gay Caballero?'" A checkup revealed that Mr. Davis was far removed from a radio.

* * *

The mule in the Penco Hour, WJAS, will be named tonight before it starts the long trek from South America to Pittsburgh. The question is whether the mule should be named Rosita or Jose. "It will be called many names before it reaches Pittsburgh," muses Alexander, the operator.

HORSE LAUGH

Get this: KDKA will broadcast the laugh of Otto Gray's shetland pony next time the Cowboy brings his band here. The pony, only a few weeks old, will be carried into the studio.

Attractive Morning Dress

Pattern 9009

Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS.

The model shown today features lines that are slimmering, from the diagonal closing of the bodice to the pleated panel set in the skirt. The coat effect, created by clever placing of buttons, is worthy of comment. Short kimona sleeves are very comfy.

Pattern 9009 makes up beautifully in percale, gingham, cotton broadcloth, rayon or pique. A dot, a floral or a geometric design may be chosen in color on a white ground, or in white on a ground of pink, yellow, green or blue. Pearl buttons will launder.

Designed only for sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material.

No dress-making experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped, or stamps, for each pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE wanted.

Our PATTERN BOOK of NEW SPRING and SUMMER STYLES is FIFTEEN CENTS, but only TEN CENTS when ordered with a pattern. Address all mail and orders to the Sun-Telegraph Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

U. S. PRISONERS TO BUILD ROADS

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP.)—Two hundred prisoners at the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary shortly will be sent to Fort Bragg at Fayetteville, N. C., for road construction on the Military Reservation, under an agreement just made between the Department of Justice and the War Department.

The convicts, both whites and Negroes, are to be employed under direction of the post commander and Federal prison guards to build roads and trails on the 122,000-acre government reservation, for which there are no appropriations available at this time. In announcing the new plan the Department of Justice said the transfer was made not only to lessen congestion at the penitentiary, but to furnish healthy work for the men and at the same time accomplish work for which no funds could be found.

Sour Stomach

Just a tasteless dose of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in water. That is an alkali, effective, yet harmless. It has been the standard antacid for 50 years among physicians everywhere. One spoonful will neutralize at once many times its volume in acid. It is the right way, the quick, pleasant and efficient way to kill the excess acid. The stomach becomes sweet, the pain departs. You are happy again in five minutes.

Don't depend on crude methods. Employ the best way yet evolved in all the years of searching. That is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade-Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

A clear skin is irresistible!

You can feel the rejuvenating effect S.S.S. brings the body by the increase of red-blood-cells.

A clear, smooth, lovely skin enhances personal attractiveness. Men admire it. Women praise and secretly envy. More happiness and friends may depend upon it.

Thousands have turned to S.S.S. when the appetite first signaled danger. It is a time-tested remedy. Purely vegetable. Easily assimilated. Pleasant to take.

YOUR popularity may depend upon a clear, smooth, lovely skin. It is the accepted way of telling the degree of health a person possesses. Naturally a skin which bespeaks health attracts.

Skilled physicians recognize the appearance of skin blemishes, lack of appetite, flabby flesh and loss of energy as an indication that the body's power of resistance is low—that there is a deficiency of red-blood-cells.

The way to the skin is through the blood. Strong, healthy blood nourishes the body and promotes smooth, clear skin.

Many thousands have regained their strength and charm by taking S.S.S. It is Nature's own blood tonic for raising the body's power of resistance to infection and disease, improving the appetite, building firm flesh and clearing the skin.

S.S.S. promotes healthy body building. It increases the number of red-blood-cells. It is made from strictly fresh vegetable drugs and has a successful record of over 100 years back of it.

All good drug stores sell S.S.S. in two sizes. Ask for the larger size. It is more economical.

REID CLAIMS SELF DEFENSE

Vester Reid, 24, Negro, of Elm street, on trial for murder before Visiting Judge M. Ward Fleming, of Crawford County, may learn his fate late today.

He is charged with the death of Henry M. Singletary, 34, Negro, of 2232 Tustin street, September 14. Arguments of the attorneys and the judge's charge followed the presentation of brief closing testimony this morning.

Reid, on the stand in his own defense, said Singletary had gone to his house and asked for liquor.

"I told him I had none," said Reid, "and he cut me on the neck with a razor, and ran. After I got a doctor to dress my wound I sent a man to get a policeman and went to Singletary's house. I heard someone coming behind me and thought it was the 'cop,' and I opened Singletary's door and told him I was going to have him arrested. He came at me with a knife and cut my head. Then I shot him."

Assistant District Attorney B. Meredith Reid is prosecuting the case.

INCOME TAXES NEAR BUDGET

WASHINGTON, March 19. — (AP.)—Further Treasury reports on the March 15 collection of income taxes indicated today that budget estimates for the first quarter's receipts would be nearly met.

Up to the close of business on March 17, receipts turned in amounted to $99,666,010, about $10,000,000 behind the total counted by the same time last year.

If this proportion should apply also to the remaining collections as they are audited and reported to the treasury, the quarterly total would be about $50,000,000 behind the $601,000,000 collected last year.

It was the expectation of the treasury when the budget for this quarter was made up, and a reduction was made in the tax rate, that the quarterly collection would total about $550,000,000.

2 Suspects Freed In Kidnaping Plot

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Samuel Handel and Harry Fleisch, both of Detroit, who were accused of aiding in the kidnaping of Max Price, New Haven, Conn., real estate broker, last January, were freed in Supreme Court in habeas corpus proceedings. The men declared they were in Detroit the night of the kidnaping.

RAILWAY BUSES OPPOSED

Opposition to the applications of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad and the Penn Bus Lines appeared at the hearings begun today before the Public Service Commission.

The railroad's application to abandon passenger service between Pittsburgh and Avella, Washington County, is being opposed by several townships in Washington County, the boroughs of Carnegie, Greentree and Avella and private citizens.

The Penn Bus Lines, a subsidiary of the West Penn Railways, wants to extend its bus service over the territory which the railroad would like to quit serving. Opponents to this application include the Pennsylvania Railroad, Oriole Coach Line and E. Bigi, a bus operator.

HELP KIDNEYS BY DRINKING MORE WATER

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood, and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation.

"BUSTER" COHEN

REM does double duty in this home

Back and forth to school in all sorts of weather. Outdoor play afterwards, often in wet and cold. That's how "Buster" Cohen of 1146 E. Lombard St., Baltimore, spends his time. Naturally he doesn't escape coughs, but his mother has learned what to do for them. Her husband had tried REM when he had a bad cough and "found it so good that since then we don't use any other cough medicine." So when Buster starts coughing, out comes the bottle of REM—and the cough doesn't linger long. One reason for REM'S remarkable effectiveness is the special ingredient it contains that isn't found in ordinary cough syrups. Harmless—pleasant—effective—what more could you ask?

REM's exclusive formula explains its splendid results. Economical, too!

MANIU CABINET PASSES CRISIS

BUCHAREST, Rumania, March 19.—(AP.)—The Bucharest newspapers published rumors that Premier Maniu on Friday presented the resignation of his cabinet to the regency council. The action was said to have been caused by the decision of the council to investigate the situation in Bessarabia. The resignation later was withdrawn.

The premier was said to have taken the stand that such an investigation would cause renewal of panic after the government had given assurance that tranquility prevailed there.

Tube Feeding Ends Hunger Strike

PARIS, March 19.—(AP.)—A 19-day hunger strike by Marthe Hanau, jailed woman financier, ended against her will today when officials at the Cochin Hospital carried out a forcible feeding operation.

Despite her weakness, Mme Hanau objected strenuously and it required eight attendants to place a tube in her throat.

Her lawyers said they had not been advised of the decision of the officials to resort to forcible feeding, and registered an immediate protest with the legal authorities.

Madame Hanau was arrested 15 months ago and an investigation started into her vast financial enterprises.

EDUCATOR ENDS LIFE BY SHOT

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 19 (AP.)—Dwight R. Meigs, 48, prominent business man and former head of the Hill School for Boys, at Pottstown, Pa., was dead today, the result of a bullet wound which police said was self-inflicted.

Meigs, grandson of Dr. Matthew Meigs, founder of the Hill School, was found in a serious condition in his apartment and was taken to a hospital where he died shortly afterward. An automatic pistol was found at his side.

Meig's friends said he had met with recent financial reverses.

Meigs became president of the Pottstown Hill School in 1913, and after serving for three years resigned to come here and enter the lumber business.

His widow was formerly Miss Ruth K. Payne, Harrisburg, Pa., whom he married in 1923.

While at Yale, Meigs was captain of the varsity swimming team. At Oxford he was a member of the tennis squad.

Rockefeller Head Visions Ideal Student

SEATTLE, Wash., March 19.—(AP.)—Dr. Max Mason, president of the Rockefeller Foundation and former president of the University of Chicago, believes the time will come when university students will be so intent upon acquiring knowledge that it will be necessary for physicians to watch them and prevent them from studying too hard.

Dr. Mason, who revealed this belief on arrival here yesterday in the interests of the Foundation, was quick to add, however, that such precautions seemed unnecessary at present.

"Students of the future will attend college to fit themselves for a specific function of life," Dr. Mason said. "They will come to learn and nobody can stop them. They will listen to a lecture every week or two, and the remainder of their time time they will study."

3 Confess Slaying Of Deputy Sheriff

DENVER, Colo., March 19.—(AP.)—Warned that they probably will hang for the fatal shooting of Deputy Sheriff C. A. Hickman, of Eads, Colo., and that a straightforward story was their sole hope for escape, three confessed robbers of the Manter, Kan., State Bank, have admitted they all are equally guilty in the slaying.

They denied previous statements that Claude Rhea killed Hickman. The other confessed slayers are John Walter and Andrew Halliday.

Every Man Who Has
$25,000 (or more) Life Insurance
Should Have an Insurance Trust

AN Insurance Trust not only takes charge of your insurance money, it not only invests it and distributes the income to your family according to your directions—but more than this, it may carry a discretionary power that enables the Trustee to help your family through any emergency or through any unforeseen situation.

Suppose, for instance, that after your death your wife had a long illness, or one of the children were hurt. If your were there, you would see that they received whatever attention they needed—but you cannot foresee these things and you cannot leave specific directions, otherwise than by a trust, that will take care of them.

Under an Insurance Trust, the Trustee meets these and similar situations, just as you would if you were there—making extra disbursements of money when they are needed, and giving advice where it is needed.

Every situation is prepared for.

Arrange an Insurance Trust with The Colonial Trust Company and obtain this protection for your family. Your insurance company will be glad to co-operate with you and The Colonial in making such an agreement.

TO discharge the duties of trustee, administrator, executor or guardian with diligence, judgment and skill, is one of our legal obligations.

To bring to this work, the same personal interest—the same sympathy—the same individual attention to specific family problems—the same humanness—you yourself now show, we regard as an equally strong moral obligation.

Turning the light of Truth on false and misleading statements in recent cigarette advertising

WHAT ANOTHER MANUFACTURER of cigarettes chooses to say about his product is not our affair. Even when he sees fit to misrepresent his product and leave false impressions concerning it, that still is his business—not ours.

But—when, in his advertising, he goes beyond his own product and makes false statements or leaves misleading impressions about other cigarettes—then it is time that the truth be told.

Some time ago a manufacturer of cigarettes used the following statements in his advertising:

"The extra secret heating process removes from (————) harmful irritants, corrosive acrids, which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way, and which cause throat irritation and coughing."

"No matter how much or how little you pay for cigarettes you have a choice of only two general classes, and not more than two. In one class you have the billions of cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way and in the other class you have (————), the toasted cigarette, a product of modern science, a cigarette from which harmful irritants have been removed by that extra secret process described by the phrase 'It's Toasted'."

WHEN THESE STATEMENTS were first made, we assumed that they were a casual phase of that manufacturer's advertising and did not represent a deliberate and calculated policy. After making a few such statements, he abandoned this particular form of advertising. However, other statements used in his advertising came to the attention of the Federal Trade Commission on a question of their truthfulness.

As a result of the action of the Federal Trade Commission he was ordered to stop his admitted practice of using in his advertising false testimonials of non-smokers to the effect that they kept slender by smoking his brand of cigarettes, and was further ordered to stop using other fake testimonials and the specious argument that all can keep slender by smoking that brand of cigarettes. He then began to use again the form of statement quoted above or variations of it.

IF ANY MANUFACTURER chooses to say that the tobaccos he uses contain "harmful irritants, corrosive acrids, that are injurious to the throat," and then to claim that these things are removed by the heat-treating process, that is his own affair. But when he tries to create the impression that it is general practice to use in cigarettes such rank tobaccos as he describes, we object to the attempted reflection on the industry.

We have never used in our blend those rank tobaccos which can be properly described as containing "harmful irritants, corrosive acrids," nor do we believe that they are used by some of the other manufacturers.

If that manufacturer wishes to advertise heat treatment, calling it toasting or what-not, that is his right. But when, in so doing, he tries to create the impression that he is the only maker of cigarettes who treats tobaccos with heat, the truth again needs to be told.

The publication of a fake testimonial is no greater perversion of the truth than to imply that the heat treatment of tobaccos is an exclusive process with any single manufacturer.

THE FACT is that the use of heat treatment in the manufacture of tobacco is about the most commonplace and universally practiced method in the industry. It has long been standard practice.

We use heat treatment in its most modern and scientific application, both in the preparation and in the manufacture of those mild, fragrant, ripe tobaccos that carry their natural goodness into CAMELS.

The first CAMEL Cigarette we ever made was manufactured under the heat-treating process. Every one of the billions of CAMELS produced since has been manufactured under heat treatment. We rely upon heat to the limits of its possibilities to make our good tobaccos better. It cannot make inferior tobaccos good.

WHETHER OR NOT a manufacturer, to have something to talk to the public about, attaches a contrivance to his heat-treating machines to catch, condense and bottle the vapors that come from them can have no more effect toward improving the tobacco than your catching and bottling the vapors that come from your teapot would have toward improving the tea in the pot.

Our own brand, CAMEL, continues to grow, but we are, nevertheless, unwilling to let these far-reaching false statements or impressions regarding the cigarette industry go uncorrected.

GANGSTERS KILL VICTIM WITH TOWEL

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

THEY tell a story about Jim Davis, the announced candidate for the Senate, and his mother and his younger brother, Dave, who is the mercantile appraiser of Allegheny County.

Jim was born in Wales, Dave was born in this country, and a few years ago, after Jim had gained national prominence, somebody regretted to Mrs. Davis that her big boy, because he had been born in the Old Country, was not eligible to be president.

"Well," Mrs. Davis consoled herself, "Dave could be elected, couldn't he?"

Our weakness is forming societies against this and that. The plan we have under way now calls for organization of the Society Opposed to Removing Hats in Elevators. We are not, understand, prejudiced against what we have nicknamed the fair sex. In fact, among our intimates we are known as Sir Walter of the Raleighs, so polite are we in the presence of women, bless 'em. But we have never been able to appreciate the politeness which is supposed to be signified by removing one's hat as soon as a beautiful or not-beautiful woman steps into the elevator. We have been observing things in our quiet way and we have learned that seven of every ten hats which are doffed in an elevator are crushed in the doffing.

But aside from the crush, why should you? If you remove your hat to strangers in a hotel elevator, why shouldn't you remove it to strangers in the hotel lobby? Or in a freight elevator? Or in the Hunt Armory? Or in the press box at the Pitt Stadium? . . . We are becoming indignant; we quit, the society is disbanded.

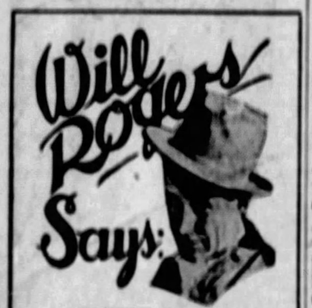
Purchasing Agents See Trade Movie

The activities of the Wheeling Steel Corporation were witnessed by members of the Purchasing Agents' Association at their monthly meeting in the Union Club last night, in a motion picture entitled "Steel-ed to the Purpose." The picture was shown through arrangements made by E. D. Adams, general purchasing agent for the concern. E. P. Goetz presided.



BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 19.

AMERICA'S favorite "prodigal son," Scarface Al Capone, has returned to us and in his honor we killed two fatted gangsters, and met him with more publicity than we did the release of Mr. Coolidge after his six years of solitary incarceration. Capone goes free to take up his useful life's work, and on the same front page, Doheny, who developed a great industry and has given high wages to thousands for years, is called a "menace to society."

We who lived neighbors to him know that if he is convicted of "staking" all old mining days friends, he will serve 2,000 years. I joke about our prominent men, but at heart I believe in 'em. I do think there is times when traces of "dumbness" crop up in official life, but not of lokedness.

Yours, WILL.

BROWN VISITS ARMSTRONG AND KLINE

Davis' Partner Hopes for Support of County Boss, 'Old Friend of Mayor'

Francis Shunk Brown, of Philadelphia, candidate for governor, called today upon Mayor Charles H. Kline and County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong. In fact, he called twice, but on the first visit the former attorney general found he was too early for both the Mayor and the Commissioner.

Later, when Brown had returned and held an interview with Armstrong in the county commissioner's office, he was asked:

"Will Commissioner Armstrong support you for governor?"

"I'm not a soothsayer," replied Brown, "but I hope so."

Armstrong was equally noncommital. Asked if he would support Brown he said: "He did not ask me."

Brown then paid his second visit to Mayor Kline. Upon leaving he said: "We had a very pleasant talk. You know, we are old friends."

MAYOR SILENT

The Mayor, through his secretary, said that he had nothing to say of the visit, that Brown had called merely to pay his respects.

Brown also called upon County Commissioner E. V. Babcock and District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner.

Brown, a candidate on the ticket with Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, is opposing the state Republican organization ticket headed by Senator Joseph R. Grundy and Samuel S. Lewis as candidates for senator and governor, respectively.

Brown, who came here to argue a case before the Supreme Court, arrived late last night from Huntingdon, Pa., where he attended the funeral of former Gov. Martin G. Brumbaugh, who appointed Brown attorney general.

GREETED BY LEADERS

Arriving at the William Penn Hotel, Brown was met by Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, Judge James B. Drew, Councilman Charles Anderson, County Road Commissioner Edward M. Kenna, Attorney O. K. Eaton, former Congressman John M. Morin and Attorney Armin H. Friedman, of McKeesport.

He declined to make a formal statement, with the explanation that he was preparing his platform and would announce it in the near future. If said his stand on all pertinent questions, including prohibition, would be stated unequivocally.

He said he was unable to speak authoritatively on the balance of the Davis-Brown slate, as the candidates for the other offices would be determined by workers in various parts of the state other than Philadelphia.

One of the first persons to greet Brown at Pennsylvania Station was former Mayor William A. Magee, who has been circulating Brown's nomination petitions among attorneys.

Nomination petitions were taken out yesterday for Paul Wagner as candidate for State Senator in the Forty-fourth district; Louis Y. Borkon for assemblyman in the Fifth district, and Harry I. Lutz for assemblyman in the Third district.

WESTMORELAND REVOLT

From Westmoreland County, where Judge Charles D. Copeland, a Democrat, recently swept the county on an anti-prohibition ticket in a Republican stronghold, come indications of a revolt. Attorney Charles C. Crowell yesterday announced that he would seek the Republican nomination for Congress, opposing Congressman Adam M. Wyant. He declared he will run on an anti-prohibition platform. Wyant, seeking renomination after several terms, is generally recognized as a dry. Both candidates reside in Greensburg.

Philip H. Dewey, manager of the state workmen's compensation insurance fund, today announced in Harrisburg he would contest for the Republican nomination for secretary of internal affairs. Dewey, a past master of the State Grange, indorsed Francis Shunk Brown for governor, and James J. Davis for United States senator.

City Considering North Side Purchase

The city is considering the purchase of property at the southeast corner of St. Ives and Kirkbride streets, North Side, for a storage yard for the Bureau of Water.

Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang plans to confer with City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt on the purchase, Council having balked at the immediate payment of $20,000 demanded by the owners. The assessed value, according to City Assessor Thomas McMahon, is $15,400.

WHITE HOUSE GANG

Squabbles in Gang Lead To Firmer Friendship

Theodore Roosevelt, when President of the United States, started the adventurous, rollicking, joyous career of the White House Gang by sending his youngest son, Quentin, to the Force Public School in Washington. Here the gang was recruited. The accredited members are Charles (Taffy) Taft, "Brom" Seeley, Dick (Sailor) Chew, Edward (Slats) Stead, also called "Bedstead," Walker White, "T. R.," the most active member of the gang; Quentin, the leader, and Earle Looker, the author of this story.

Each day, after school, the gang went into a huddle to confound all rules of deportment in high places, mingle in the lives of presidents and policemen, win victories, taste honor, suffer punishments and engage in escapades which were swept along the wires to national publicity. Many exploits of the gang, however, either remain unknown or were known only to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Some there were securely hidden even from them.

CHAPTER XIII.

"SIT still," Q advised, speaking out of the side of his mouth, and looking straight ahead of him, into the sea of faces, "If we get up and bow, as everybody expects us to, we'll be blamed for the whole thing!"

As the show continued, there were a number of impromptu lines directed towards us and the collars, to the huge delight of the audience. We were rather fed up with that sort of thing, long before the end was reached. When it was, we rushed out to the White House carriage and the protection of Reader, gladly enough. Reader, seeing that something had gone wrong, wheeled his horses away from the theater entrance and the outpouring laughing audience upon the sidewalk, in an abrupt but beautiful arc.

There was another occasion, on which the Eton collars proved embarrassing, this time, however, not in public. We had taken them off, in the comparative seclusion of the great upper hall, and were busily engaged writing a new password in the neckbands, for permanent record, combined with great secrecy. Nobody in the Gang knew, exactly, what this word meant. It was obscure but euphonious, and Q, its discoverer, told us he had "got it out of a solemn fat history, from the Congressional Library." He added, "Father reads every single book they get—right off." (Utterly impossible, even for TR!)

TR ordered a halt, and the three men turned to the chest and, of course, Mr. Pinchot found his collar missing. There was an exhaustive search, led most earnestly by Q.

"'Something is rotten in the state of Denmark!'" TR said, finally, "and I smell it most pungently, when I am near Quen-tin Roos-e-velt!"

The men had had much too good a time to be much annoyed by the loss of the collar, least of all Mr. Pinchot—although left with his Adam's apple completely exposed.

"Mr. President," he said, with an unsmiling pretense at formality, "I do not know if there is any precedent for a guest who has received an invitation to dine at the White House, suddenly tendering his regrets, on account of his not having a collar to his name?"

Suspected
President Justified in His Suspicions

"Not at all," M-i-s-t-e-r Pinshot," TR responded in the same vein, "because your predicament is due, probably, to the mischievous and ungentlemanly behavior of my youngest son. Therefore, you would be welcome, even without a shirt!"

Mr. Pinchot bowed.

Q, his fair skin suddenly flushing, saw the enormity of his offense. TR regarded him sternly, but disregarded the opportunity for a reprimand—perhaps, making it more pointed by refraining—and taking the elbows of his chief forester and cabinet member, walked them from the attic with great dignity. We could, however, hear their suppressed laughter, as they went down the stairs.

"Whew!" Q said, "That was a close one! I think it was a dirty trick for me to do that, don't you? And that collar's so far down in the wall, it'll never be fished out . . ."

Whether Mr. Pinchot was able to borrow a collar of proper size from one of the ushers, or whether—as Quentin heard—he went to dinner with a handkerchief about his neck, I do not know. I remember, however, that Mr. Pinchot's friendliness for the Gang was in no way affected, except that the humorous twinkle in his eye was possibly more pronounced, when we met again.

It may be that I have given a false impression of the Gang's familiarity with grown people—especially with TR. The Gang met him many times, over a considerable period of time; yet, at each meeting, he made some practical, unforgettable contribution—something by which he could be remembered. Some men

Scrimmage
Notables Throw Medicine-Ball With Boys

This secret word which the Gang was industriously engaged in spelling out, immediately became common property, for an usher managed to sneak up behind us, and look over our shoulders. We could not forgive his rude guffaw, and, in high dudgeon, immediately changed it. Yet the word made the rounds of the White House Staff, and often used by them—to our humiliation—in future conversation with us.

Some retaliatory measures, although not directed against the offending usher, but, boylike, against any available member of society, made Gifford Pinchot, then Chief of the Division of Forestry in the Department of Agriculture, and, later, Governor of Pennsylvania, the unsuspecting victim.

Mr. Pinchot—privately called "Pin-shot" simply because we knew it to be the wrong way to pronounce his name—had appeared in our midst in company with TR and James R. Garfield, Secretary of the Interior, called "Jimmy," instantly, because we took to him on the spot. The grown-ups had come up to the attic (a room associated, in my mind, with the punishment I had undergone for turning off the lights on TR), and, flinging off their dinner-coats, joined us in a scrimmage with a medicine-ball.

Hide Collar
Gifford Pinchot's Neck-Band Stuffed in Hole

The attic was warmish and all the men—they were in formal evening dress—took off their collars and ties, as we had done in Chase's, and placed them, with their dress-coats, upon a convenient chest. There they stood, in white shirt-fronts and black vests, tremendous targets for the medicine-ball, which rolled, eventually, out of sight, into a dark corner.

While the ball was being sought for and recovered, Q, who had been struck by the difference in the size of Mr. Pinchot's neck, as compared with his father's, seized upon the smaller collar, and under pretense of helping to search for the ball, stuffed it down a special hole, we all knew about, under the eaves. After which, he innocently rejoined the players.

WILL PROTEST SEDITION LAW

The Pittsburgh branch of the International Labor Defense has announced a conference against criminal syndicalist and sedition laws, to be held at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller street, April 6. Plans are being made, according to the Labor Defense, to develop the conference into a nation-wide protest against the law, now in force in 35 states.

Preliminary work of the campaign, it was pointed out, will be started in the Lyceum tonight at 8 o'clock when a protest against alleged unfair methods of police in stopping Communist demonstrations March 6, will be voiced.

"The campaign launched in Pittsburgh will be centered around the district until the release of three workers in the Blawnox case has been obtained," a Labor Defense announcement reads.

"The prosecutions are viewed as a reign of terror . . . against workers to further reduce living standards and wages," the announcement states.

Officer Appointed In Hospital Drive

Taylor Allderdice yesterday announced appointment of J. Rogers Flannery as vice president of committees now being formed to raise a $100,000 fund for the Roselia Foundling Asylum and Maternity Hospital. The institution was opened 39 years ago.

In announcing the appointment Mr. Allderdice lauded the work of the home. He said that only six in every 100 women and children aided by the home ever are able to pay for the service they received.

Instead of affirming the plans Council decided to make an inspection trip tomorrow. At the same time the members plan to inspect other street projects presented to them, including the extension of the Boulevard of the Allies.

Flinn toward the building of a swimming pool at Umbstaetter Reservation. Mr. Flinn has for meany years been a member of the executive board.

Plans are being made to start work on the pool next month, in order that it may be in service when the camp opens June 30. The new pool and its adjuncts will be independent of the present lake, which will continue to use the center for water sports.

The announcement of Mr. Flinn's gift follows closely the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. May who last week let it be known they would make possible a health center for the reservation.

Stowe Township Man Suddenly Dies

'BATTLESHIP' CAR FOUND IN CREEK

Body Found by Schoolboy Identified by Brother; Lay Killing to Rum Ring

Bullet proof glass and half-inch steelguard plates—Sam Monastero's armored car—was towed into a garage today while city and county detectives examined minutely its every trapping.

But Sam's body, which the equipment of war failed to protect, lay in the morgue a strangled victim of the guerillas who resented his activities.

Monastero, 45, of 39 Perryview street, North Side, was found dead late last night in his automotive "Battleship." A school boy heard the whirr of wheels slushing in the mud beside a creek bordering the Jack's Run road, West View.

The engine was ploughing sluggishly, the lights were on—the man lay, strangled by his own neck-tie and a turkish towel. Beside him were a loaded shot gun and a revolver filled with unused bullets.

Bruises on his face and head indicated, deputy coroners said, that he probably had been rendered unconscious by his assailants and then strangled.

KIN'S MURDER RECALLED

Monastero narrowly escaped death August 6, when his brother, Steve Monastero, fell dead in front of St. John's Hospital, his body riddled by gansters' bullets. Sam ran into the hospital as the killers' car sped by.

John Wakely, a school boy, found Monastero's body lying on the back seat of the car and notified Dale W. Pinkerton, of 828 Jackman avenue, Avalon, a carpenter. Pinkerton summoned Sergt. J. A. Blair and Patrolman R. R. Riley, of the State Highway Patrol.

It was believed that the car, with its lights burning, the engine running and the rear wheels spinning in the mud, had been driven into the creek by his assailants. Gasoline had been splashed around the rear of the machine in an apparent attempt to destroy it by fire. The splashing water, however, prevented the gasoline from igniting.

GUNS FOUND IN CAR

In connection with Steve's death police arrested Joe Pangallo, of McKees Rocks, but he was released for lack of evidence. Sam also was held for questioning by police, later being released.

Samuel Duca, the slain man's brother-in-law, identified the body at the morgue and gave the victim's occupation as a produce merchant. Detectives were told that Monastero was last seen alive about noon yesterday in the produce yards.

RELEASE SUSPECT

Detectives, a few hours after finding Monastero's body, arrested a man in the vicinity of the victim's home, but later released him when his answers to their questions convinced them that he knew nothing of the slaying.

A cap found in the death car gave detectives a clue which they believe may be valuable. A brother of the slain man told them that Sam never wore anything but a felt hat.

Several months ago Monastero was arrested in connection with a double gang killing during a wedding celebration in the Eagles Hall, West Stockton avenue, but was released after being questioned.

The murder last night recalled to police the killing in 1914 of Steve Monastero's mother-in-law when she opposed his brother Lorito, who was friendly toward Steve's divorced wife. Lorito was arrested the day of the killing, but walked out of the North Side Police Station shortly after being taken there. He was rearrested, tried and found to be insane, and sent to Woodville Asylum, where he escaped several months later. He never was heard from again.

Anderson Still Opposed To Kline's New Auto

When Mayor Charles H. Kline gets his new automobile it will not be with the consent of Councilman Charles Anderson. The latter voted "No" on the proposal at a meeting of the councilmanic finance committee yesterday. Councilmen English, Alderdice, Kambach and Connelley approved the ordinance.

"I wouldn't have voted for an automobile for Council if I had it to do over again," he remarked.

The Mayor's present machine was purchased February 8, 1928, the cost being $4,000 in addition to the trade-in value of an old automobile. The present ordinance permits an expenditure of $4,500 in addition to the trade-in value of his present car.

Pitt Dean Declares State Leads in Agriculture

Pennsylvania, referred to as an industrial state, is the greatest agricultural state in the union, Dean Louis K. Manley, of the school of business administration, University of Pittsburgh, told Chamber of Commerce members yesterday. He spoke before the committee on marketing facilities, engaged in studying market problems here, with the view of obtaining greater values for farm products.

Dean Manley outlined the eight year program of research made possible by the Buhl Foundation gift to the university in which the chamber will assist. He explained a study being made to determine the relation between price and distance to market, and price and quality of farm produce.

The speaker predicted it would be several years before all facts were assembled and before an accurate comprehensive study of the market situation could be made from which recommendations toward improvements can be suggested.

POLICE SEEKING FUGITIVES IN 4 HOLDUPS

Pistol Battle Fought in Bedford Avenue Theft; Stores Robbed by Thugs

Bandits who invaded four stores, one from which they escaped after exchanging shots with a woman victim last night, were being sought by police today.

Seizing a revolver after being robbed of $35 by two Negroes in her drug store at 1925 Bedford avenue, Gwendolyn Brown, Negro proprietress, ran into the street and fired at the fleeing thugs. The robbers, after returning fire, ran down Bedford avenue. The Brown woman was alone in the store when the Negroes entered and, at pistol point, took the cash from a register.

CLERKS HELD AT BAY

J. W. Lutton, of 48 Watsonia boulevard, and Irwin Wood, of 1524 Buena Vista street, clerks in Kutscher's drug store, at 1501 Buena Vista street, were held at bay by four thugs who entered the pharmacy shortly before 9 p. m. While three of them covered the employes with revolvers their accomplice emptied the cash register of $132.

DEALER HELD UP

Two armed men escaped with $125 after holding up the fruit store of August Corso, at 6542 Frankstown avenue. The robbers took $100 from Corso's pockets and $25 from a cash till, Corso told police.

Thirty-five dollars was stolen from the register in the grocery store of John Jones, at 624 Lincoln avenue, by two men, one a Negro, who forced Charles Fox, a clerk, into a rear room, police reported.

CITY CENSURED FOR SLASHING WORKERS

Councilman Anderson Says Useful Employes Go, But Soft Jobs Are Protected

Laborers who really work always are laid off first by the Department of Public Works, Councilman Charles Anderson charged at a committee meeting of Council yesterday.

"I've been making this speech so often I suppose you're tired of it," he said. "It isn't new. I said the same thing in the Babcock administration, and the Magee administration, and now the Kline administration."

"Make a motion and we'll see what can be done," suggested W. Y. English, presiding.

"If you can do anything you're better than anyone since I've been here," said Anderson. "I want to know how many men in the department are actually engaged in work. If I ask for a report it will say all are working and that's all we'll hear about it."

English declared that the present reorganization of the works' department was for the purpose of keeping only enough actual men to do the work and stay within the budget requirements.

Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang, questioned by Anderson, said that about 350 laborers had been discharged and reiterated his former explanation that the cut of $187,000 in the highways and sewers payroll and the acquisition of improved machinery were responsible.

"Who is to blame?" demanded Anderson.

"No person is to be blamed," was the reply. "This is due to a condition existing, and not to any theory."

GOOD SPELLER, WINS TIE

Because several members of the South Hills Kiwanis Club have difficulty in spelling "connoisseur," Dave Allison, a member of the club, is in possession of a beautiful necktie today.

Dave came by the tie yesterday afternoon when the club held a luncheon and spelling bee in the Mt. Lebanon United Lutheran Church. After luncheon was disposed of, the members made themselves ready for the contest. Words like government, column and rutabaga were easy for the spellers. Then came "connoisseur" and victory for Allison.

Works of Masters Feature Vogeley Art Exhibit

By PENELOPE REDD

The opening of the Vogeley galleries in the William Penn Hotel introduces an atmosphere wherein the decorative arts are heightened by the harmonious addition of the finest in the pictorial arts.

Penelope Redd

From the ancestral halls of Europe's past for the future ancestral halls of America, comes a collection of choice paintings, appropriately installed in a Pine Room of early American derivation.

Paintings by Frans Hals and lesser Dutch masters, by Reynolds Hoppner, Lawrence, Raeburn, and various English painters of the eighteenth century, by Corot, Daubigny and other of the French Barbizon masters of the nineteenth century, and by Ernest Lawson and fellow Americans are exhibited.

Century by centur they synchronize because they have the quality in common, of being the representative best of the period.

The spacious Vogeley galleries lend themselves admirably to the presentation of a series of tapestries, in replica because the unprocurable originals are treasured in the state museums of France.

A collection of bronzes in the classic mode makes appeal to the tactile sense. One finds Egyptian goddesses and Greek athletes losing no whit of their monumental quality in these small casts.

The Vogeley galleries, designed by an able decorator, add new note to the places here where one may see beautiful objects sympathetically arranged.

The opening exhibitions will continue for two weeks.

ASK PARLEY ON R. R. CHANGES

Mayor Charles H. Kline has been asked by Council to call a conference with members of that body, city engineers and Pennsylvania Railroad officials concerning improvements planned in the vicinity of Eleventh street and the Pennsylvania station.

Lieut. David Bennett, of the East Pittsburgh police, arrested Burns last night and turned him over to Braddock authorities.

STOLEN CAR HIT BY TRAIN

Carnegie police today were searching for Frank Stefora, 19, of Broadway, Carnegie, and Alex McKeefer, 22, of Canonsburg, who escaped arrest, police said, when they fled from an automobile sidewiped by a Pittsburgh, Chartiers and Youghiogheny freight train in James street, Carnegie, this morning.

Lieutenant Harry H. Keisling, of the Carnegie police, was pursuing the youths when the automobile, said to have been stolen from John A. Brehm, of 18 Iron street, Canonsburg, was struck by the train. The machine bore Ohio license plates, but Pennsylvania plates were found inside.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: Do you think the selection of a site for the Town Hall should be put up to a vote of the people instead of being left in the hands of a board?

MARIE COSNER, Braddock: "In the United States the majority is supposed to rule by the right of the vote. With this thought in mind I think it is only fair that the selection of the Town Hall site should be put up to a vote. This method is best and gives an unbiased idea as to where the majority want the auditorium erected."

Miss Cosner

EMMA NOAH, ticket seller, Sixth street: "By all means the Town Hall site should be put up to the voters for a decision. By this method some idea of the right site can be secured. Voters, naturally, are the deciding factors as to where the building should be located. There has been too much time lost in the selection, and the quicker it is settled, the better."

Miss Noah

BERTHA WAGNER, Braddock: "Yes, the taxpayers should have something to say about such an important project as the Town Hall. The vote has been decided long ago as the best method in deciding what the public wants. Then, why shouldn't a vote be the best method on this proposition. The public is entitled to consideration."

Miss Wagner

CAPT. JACK EVANS, lecturer, Miracle Theater: "Absolutely. Voters should have the right to decide where the building should go. But they should take into consideration that the Town Hall must be a paying proposition. In my mind, the best location would be near or next a railroad siding. In that manenr big road companies, circuses, and other big entertainment companies could back their equipment right to the building, with little trouble."

Capt. Evans

FRED FOX, assistant, Sixth street: "The county commissioners have delayed long enough in trying to find out where the Town Hall should be located. The public is beginning to tire of delays. A vote by the people would be best, it seems to me, to bring the matter to a head and get some definite action. Pittsburgh's prestige will be greatly increased when the structure is erected."

Fred Fox

WILLIAM HECKLER, director flea circus, Miracle Theater: "If the matter was brought to a vote of the people, who in the end, 'pay the freight,' they would get the site selected without delay. As it is, those in charge have inaugurated a program of procrastination that is irksome to the public. A quick vote will settle the matter and construction can begin."

SUSPEND CHIEF AT WILMERDING

Chief of Police H. L. Snyder, of Wilmerding, was suspended by a 4 to 3 vote of Borough Council last night. The meeting was attended by citizens who packed the councilmanic hall.

Snyder, after the meeting, hinted court action if his name were impugned by members of council.

Councilman M. J. Dempster charged that the police department had become demoralized, and moved Snyder be suspended immediately. Council directed Burgess R. W. Bishop to appoint an acting chief, pending a meeting of the Police Committee, when further action of Snyder's suspension is to be taken.

Councilman J. W. Carthew, in defending Snyder prior to the chief's suspension, said the police head deserved credit because he "took orders from the burgess." Robert White, a citizen, asserted Snyder's removal was a move to rename James B. Maguire, dismissed as chief early in the year.

Councilmen James Volpe, C. H. Ray, Dempster and President Frank Kukurin voted for suspension. Councilman W. F. Pugsley, K. J. Boyle and Carthew opposed it.

A suggestion that each meeting of council be opened with prayer fell upon deaf ears. Samuel Barnes, a citizen, presented the idea when he declared Wilmerding "had received a bad name due to the wrangling of the two factions in council."

Community Builders Planning Campaign

Organization of the Community Builders' Association into a national body, and a plan to use newspapers, radio and other mediums to promote the welfare of the neighborhood grocery were advanced last night at a meeting of the association in Memorial Hall. Cox, Joseph A. Burns, W. H. Newmeyer, Louis Etting, W. P. Benson, John P. Guyer, D. E. Durbin, Iliff Jones and others. A newspaper, "The Community Builder," made its first appearance.

Traffic Snarled When Lights Fail

For half an hour today East Liberty traffic was demoralized. Then the old-time traffic policemen were rushed to the important corners, with whistles shrilling, and brought order out of chaos.

The reason for the confusion was that a motor in the traffic light control system in the East End Police Station burned out, leaving some lights on green, others on red.

The East End police were informed of the situation and dispatched traffic officers to the important intersections while the light system was repaired.

4 RADIO FIRMS SUED HERE

Four Pittsburgh radio concerns were sued in Federal Court today on charges that certain loudspeakers handled by them were an infringement on patents owned by the plaintiff, the Lektophone Corporation of New Jersey.

Lektophone asked a preliminary injunction prohibiting the concerns from using the speakers which embody the device, and for damages and an accounting of profits.

These concerns are listed as United States Radio Company of Pennsylvania, 134 Ninth street; Keystone Radio Corporation, 640 Grant street; Allied Electric Supply Company, 118 Ninth street, and Electric Appliance Company, 216 Penn avenue. The loudspeakers are named as Crosby, Colonial, Muter and Lyric.

BAIRD DRY LOAN UP ON APPEAL

Appeal of Frederick C. Baird, former prohibition administrator for the Pittsburgh district, from a judgment obtained against him by the First National Bank, was argued before the State Supreme Court here today.

Baird's attorneys said that when he was dry administrator he desired to obtain funds to expand his enforcement activities. He had an interview with the late Judge James H. Reed, father of United States Senator David A. Reed, and Judge Reed indorsed Baird's note for $12,000 and gave it to the First National Bank. A short time later Judge Reed died.

The bank called upon Baird to pay the note and when he did not do so obtained a judgment against him. Baird appealed to the Supreme Court, contending that the bank's claim should have been filed against the executors of Judge Reed's estate, Senator Reed and Robert E. Rossell.

PIANIST PLAYS 'DUET' ALONE

There's only himself to argue with when Charles H. Jennings, of 475 McNeilly avenue, hears a sour note while playing a duet.

Jennings plays the duet entirely himself, with feet and hands. For five years Jennings has wondered why the principle of the pipe organ could not be incorporated into a piano. Today he has it worked out. While his hands play tenor, Jennings' feet manipulate the bass notes with levers patterned from the organ.

It is a rough working model Jennings uses for demonstrations. Coat hangers proved to be nicely shaped for attaching at the base of the piano.

AID TO ORGAN STUDENTS

The foot levers are attached to the keyboard wires. Jennings says his invention, patent rights now being applied for, will prove helpful for the organ student at home.

Jennings never has studied music. He came here five years ago from Washington, D. C., where his sister, Miss Sara Inez Jennings, is a professional organist.

All the musical ability has been developed in playing by air, Jennings says when he was a youngster the family would chase him from the piano.

RADIO ARTIST

But self-study has brought to him the ability to write numbers. He has been heard over broadcasting stations WCAE and WJAS. Each number he has written has had to be counted out slowly—note by note. The lyrics are his own composition as well. The latest number just finished came to him when a customer entered his office on a rainy day and remarked, "We always have rain in Pittsburgh. Guess the sun is shining somewhere up above the clouds."

That was his inspiration for "Up Above the Clouds, You'll Find the Sunshine."

KILLING OF GIRL TOLD AT TRIAL

Michael Kowal, 30, of Baltimore, and the girl he loved, Catherine Bosh, 17, were sitting in a bedroom of her home in Castle Shannon last December 23, planning how to spend Christmas.

"Suddenly," Kowal testified in Criminal Court today, "my mind went blank, and I didn't remember anything until I woke up in the hospital next day. I have a faint recollection of a shooting."

A bump on the head after the shooting put Kowal in the hospital.

The shooting was the murder of Catherine, committed by Kowal, the prosecution charges.

Kowal told of his love for Catherine, but denied telling county detectives he had planned to shoot her if she refused to marry him.

"I loved Catherine," Kowal testified. "If I lived to be 100 I would still love her."

Kowal admitted he had been drinking. His counsel indicated that this would be his defense.

They were married December 17, 1928, and lived together but 12 days, during which Reisenauer was intoxicated, Mrs. Reisenauer testified. She said he walked out December 29, 1928, and did not return.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

League Busy Preparing For Play

STAY AT HOMES are finding most pleasant, and often profitable, pastimes, have you noticed? There hasn't been the least excuse for months for anyone to be bored.

Members of the Junior League, I might cite, have been so busy between trips to resorts, to Europe to Bermuda arranging for their many ambitious ventures that the weeks since the close of the season have gone by very rapidly for them.

And now the members are working on one of their most interesting projects, producing plays for children.

Of course you know that on the mornings of April 5 and 12 at 10:30 o'clock the league will present "The Wizard of Oz" in the Pitt Theater.

I might add that the event will be open to all the children of the city. Patroneases for the event, are buying blocks of tickets to be given to boys and girls in charitable institutions.

Aiken Vogue

ALTHOUGH the first days of spring have arrived in the North, the colonists in Florida are loath to end the pleasant season at the smart resorts.

Entertainments are still numerous in Palm Beach and will continue to be until mid-April. Some folks instead of coming directly home from Florida's shores are stopping over in Aiken, White Sulphur Springs, and Asheville.

Aiken right now is attracting most of the folks who have started their northward journeys from Palm Beach. The J. Frederic Byerses and their family are at the South Carolina resort, where they are prominent in sports and entertaining. On Monday evening they gave a dinner in the Palmetto Golf Club.

The Byers family is often seen riding to the hounds. And their young daughter, Nancy, rides daily on the bridle paths.

Jewish Unit Hears Talk On Peace

IF people want to end war, they must be willing to go to any length, they must sacrifice for it, they must keep peace and pursue it, study the conditions of peace and understand them and take risks, they must recognize other people's point of view and realize that it deserves as much consideration as their own; the idea of national sovereignty must be given up and some sort of machinery must be set up by which changes can be effected without war. This was the substance of the talk given yesterday afternoon by Miss Kathleen Courtney, distinguished Englishwoman, before the Pittsburgh section, National Council of Jewish Women.

There are bound to be disputes, Miss Courtney expanded, but an international course must be followed such as is followed in a nation, or between individuals, a course of conciliation, arbitration and judicial settlement. The risk of a case going against one is not comparable to the fearful risks of war, she added.

"The world is full of people who would rather do anything else, would rather even fight, than to think. But the world has got to the point where we must think," she declared. "The question of peace is terrifically fundamental and cannot be treated superficially. It demands all we can give of energy and all we can do in the way of using our minds. Everyone must ask himself, in what does security lie. International confidence as against international force is the gigantic task before us. We can put an end to war if we want to."

Music for the meeting consisted of vocal solos by Mrs. Goodman Rose, accompanied by Mrs. Herman Hailperin.

Last night Miss Courtney spoke before the Women's International League for Peace at a dinner in the Downtown Y. M. C. A.

The April meeting of the club will be changed from the Woman's City Club and will be in Miss Anna Bell Craig's studio home, "Thump and Daub House," in Walnut street.

BLACK AND WHITE MUCH FAVORED FOR SPORT WEAR

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 19.—Black and white continues to lead as the winning combination in the color field, for it has, this season, invaded the realm of sport to add to its other triumphs. For both sports wear and semi-sports costumes, black and white has been used by smart women everywhere this season. And such outfits looked as well amidst the snowy delights of Chamonix and St. Moritz, as by the sapphire seas of the Mediterranean. Although black and white is so attractive, do not believe that it can be carelessly blended.

The combination needs just as much, if not more care and thought than any other color merger, otherwise the result may be rather theatrical, and obvious. If the color scheme is to be used for a sports costume, it is advised to keep the outfit as simple as possible, let the color supply the only elaborate note.

IN order to demonstrate effectively the charms of black and white when combined to form a semi-sport ensemble, we are able to show you today two sketches of a very attractive and highly original creation from that very clever couturiere, Schiaparelli. It is of heavy black and white tweed, both colors being clearly defined in the mixture. The graceful cape is attached across the shoulders and along the outer sides of the sleeves, and reaches in adeep point almost to the skirt edge in back, creating something of a bat silhouette, as shown in the sketch. A shallow standing collar, in one piece with the front of the jacket, is the only neck finish.

THE second sketch shows the rest of the model which is one of outstanding success in the new Schiaparelli collection. The black and white tweed skirt reaches to a high waistline cut in points and worn outside a blouse of heavy white crepe. Applieues of open-meshed wool tricot resembling net form a one sided gilet with scarf collar and deep, close fitting cuffs reaching almost to the elbow.

"Really, it's the finest bread we've ever had!"

WOMEN are expressing extreme satisfaction at being able to get a loaf of bread so all 'round good as Mother Hubbard, the perfected loaf.

For now you can get, in a single loaf, all the good points you like to have in bread—golden brown crust, firm, even texture that makes slicing easy, just the taste you like, and perfect toasting-quality.

And what is more, you can depend upon the perfection of the perfected loaf day after day. You need no longer put up with getting a good enough loaf one day and a poor loaf the next. Mother Hubbard Bread is uniformly good. Now or a month from now it is always—the perfected loaf.

SIGNAL recognition of the tenth anniversary of woman suffrage is to be the keynote of the opening mass meeting of the National League of Women Voters' convention in Louisville April 28-May 3. Three distinguished citizens who contributed notably toward the woman suffrage victory and the closing events which led to the signing of the federal proclamation on August 26, 1920, Mrs. George Gellhorn, of St. Louis; Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, of New York, and Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, will address the evening assemblage.

Mrs. Gellhorn, a former director of the National American Woman Suffrage Association and a former vice president of the league, will discuss "The Debt" to pioneers who prepared the way for the participation of women in public life today. Mrs. Catt, who for more than 40 years worked for federal suffrage, is scheduled to talk on "The Contribution" which women as voters have made toward public life in these 10 years, particularly in the promotion of permanent peace among nations.

Mr. Baker, who was secretary of war in President Wilson's cabinet, and is now a member of President Hoover's law enforcement commission and a lawyer of distinction, will be the last speaker and will have as his subject "A Pledge—Human Welfare in a Modern World."

The economic and social aspects of "The Changing World" will be the theme of the second evening meeting of convention week. The speakers will be Walton Hamilton, professor of law at Yale University, and Edward Lindeman, director, New York School of Social Work.

YESTERDAY was "string ensemble day" at the Tuesday Musical Club, a delightful program being given by the ensemble under Ruth Thoburn Knox's direction. Helen Roessing, pianist for the group, was chairman of the program. This "infant department" of the club, consisting of 28 artist members of the club, was assisted by Joseph Mariano, Dominico Caputo, Julius Bielo, W. O. Schulz and M. Ferrare. Virginia Kendrick, contralto, gave two attractive groups of songs, the second one being in Irish costume. Virginia Brown Wilharm was her accompanist. The program closed with Carolyn St. John's tone poem, "Pittsburgh," which was repeated by request. The tea tables were centered with spring flowers and tall candles in silver holders and pouring were Mrs. Charles T. Ingham, Mrs. T. A. Watkins, Mrs. E. A. Bossinger, Mrs. O. K. Price, Mrs. Frank Kenworthy, Mrs. A. E. Duckam, Miss Elizabeth Herron, Mrs. Eugene Carmichael, Mrs. Henrietta Hibbard and Mrs. Ethel Reeder Jones.

"Incognito" Fools Police Once—But Second Time Comes Tag

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright, 1930, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.

IT'S tough for even lightning repartee to strike twice and with success in the same spot.

This chap Mauri Grashin had his rear license plate stolen from his car. Nevertheless he drove said car to work to the Pathe lot.

A copper hailed him within sighting distance of safety and the studio. "Where's your rear license plate?"

"That's one on you," Grashin confided. "I'm traveling incognito."

"Oh yeah?" the copper came back with the word.

"Sure. And off Grashin slid.

D. Fairbanks, Jr.

Next day Tom Lennon was chugging down a Culver City thoroughfare in his friend's car. The same copper stopped him.

"Where's your rear license plate?"

"Ha, Ha, Ha-Ed Lennon pounced on Grashin's retort: "Terrible. I'm traveling incognito."

"Ha, Ha, snarled the cop. "I looked up that word yesterday. Here's a tag, Prince."

JACK WHITING, Doug Fairbanks, Jr.'s youthful father-in-law, is to sing the lead in "Top Speed." 'Tis a rare father-in-law who warbles and heroes his way through celluloid. Bernice Claire and Rita Flynn are also in this Mervyn Leroy musik-komik.

MARY ELLEN DOHERTY of Long Beach, Cal., is an admirer of Perry Askam, local boy of musik comedy fame. No Mrs. Doherty Askam has made no pictures other than the one he is now working on in the Warner lot "Sweet Kitty Bellaires."

WINNIE LIGHTNER, a Warner player, is expected back to the studio next month. Miss Lightner hit East after "Hold Everything" and proceeded to go in very strict for dieting. Which she jolly well needed to do. Sufficiently melted, she returned to the do-re-me and for the past umpty ump weeks has checking in four thousand dollars weekly," via the personal appearance route. 'Tis reported her next flick will be "Foot Loose Widows," with the title subject to prompt change.

ABOUT "JOURNEY'S END"

TO a Glendale preview of Tiffany's production of the international stage hit, "Journey's End." And crowds turned away from a box office that hung up the S. R. O. sign. The screen version of "Journey's End" was directed by James Whale, the Englishman who originally recognized the dramatic simplicity of R. C. Sheriff's play and under whose sensitive direction it bowed onto a London stage a year ago last January. Under whose direction some 17 road companies were launched.

MAKES GREAT DRAMA

WHEN Whale came to Hollywood to transpose the play into a film he stated the screen offering would follow faithfully the stage ditto. That with the exception of a few trench and war shots the action would build in the dugout. Exactly as it does on the stage.

Mr. Whale has realized what he intended to realize with the picture. It is magnificent. Its simplicity makes great drama. Its grimness is adroitly balanced with virile humor. Never does it become maudlin or sloppy or preachy. A truly beautiful production and unique inasmuch as it actually capitalizes on the possibilities of the talking picture medium.

FROM LONDON PLAY

COLIN CLIVE, who was borrowed from the London play to portray the nerve-rawed "Captain Stanhope," gives a super performance. His performance is subtly tempered and balanced, building with fine suspense to the terrific scene between him and young Raleigh after the death of Lieut. Osborne in a raid. This grief-saturated scene of Clive's has few equals in the annals of the motion picture.

Anthony Bushell is excellent as Lieut. Hibbard. His "funk" scene, where he faces Stanhope's revolver and certain death, is done with the same quivering restraint and heart-breaking simplicity that characterize the performances from beginning to end. Billie Bevan, Ian McClaren and James Gerard are also good. David Manners, though the weakest member of the cast, is above the average.

AND GUNS BOOM

THROUGHOUT the entire story and its dug-out development is heard the dull boom of guns, quickened by the whine and crash and rattle of concentrated firing.

"JOURNEY'S END" is one of the few great achievements of this young century. This department salutes most humbly.

MUSIC

Dramamount Singers

Carnegie Music Hall

The Dramamount Singers, under the leadership of T. Carl Whitmer, assisted by a string quartet, and Samuel G. Wagner, oboist, gave a program of very old and very new music in Carnegie Music Hall last night.

J. Fred Lissfelt

This group of singers is composed of eighteen good voices. The sopranos, contrary to all rules, seem the best, with the male voices singing a veiled tone. However, the music of these singers is so good, that we may say their work is the finest novelty in local music circles. A departure from large choruses is in the wind nowadays, and the return to madrigal singing by such limited groups is engaging the interest of the most modern composers.

Their music came from the earliest English writers, from Swelinck and Orlando Lassus, that is from the first writers of choral melodies. Mr. Whitmer also contributed from his choral works; there was a stunning fragment from Honegger, and a rather forced bit of writing of Edward Melvin Harris. The Honegger music suggested the sounds in an oriental temple. Harris' "King Solomon's Wedding Procession" was rowdy.

The three pieces by Mr. Whitmer for strings, English horn and oboe, are among the best music we have heard from his pen. The "Angelus" is scored very high, but successfully suggests a beautiful mood. "Sorrow" has a primitive melody for the English horn which takes many an unexpected and intriguing turn. "Banter" is a jolly page of counterpoint for oboe, strings and piano, full of exacting harmonies that make real fun. Of the songs, "Just Tonight," is one of the most fluent that Mr. Whitmer has shown us.

Other parts were sung by Gladys Menges, Chester Sterling, and John Davies, and Alro Schultz, contralto gave a group of songs.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

TWO SPRINGS

IF I SHOULD meet you on the street today
Most unexpectedly, and you should turn
Your eyes upon me in your candid way,
Half hopefully endeavoring to discern
A trace of the old longing, I should be
So calm and careful, talking of light things,
You'd quite forget you ever spake to me
A few months back of love and wedding rings.

Thus it would end. The hundred colored moods
You knew of mine would merge into this one.
We'd chatter both, in silly platitudes,
Of folks we knew, of things that we had done;
And then I'd nod and cheerfully depart—
So cools, from March to March, the fondest heart.

GAG

DEZZO RETTER, "The Man Who Wrestles With Himself," is a big-time attraction. Recently he was touring the small towns and got on a train which was carying seven lunatics from one's asylum to another county institution. Retter didn't know that, and seated himself among them. One of the guards, who counted his charges at every station stop, starting counting after Retter got on. Using an index finger to check up his maniacs, the keeper pointed at him as he counted: "One, two, three, four," and then, seeing Retter's unfamiliar face, he said: "Who are you?"

Walter Winchell

"I'm Dezzo Retter, the man who wrestles with himself."

"Five, six, seven . . ." continued the keeper.

EVERY MAN FOR HIMSELF

BILLY ROSE, the famous songsmith, told us the above quip. Rose is married to Fannie Brice, you know, so we remarked: "I guess it'll be all right to credit that gag to Fannie, eh?"

"No," was the snap reply, "credit it to me! Fannie's name is on every fence in the country."

IT COULD HAPPEN

JACK INGLIS, one of the better clowns, swears that vaudeville conditions are so terrible that one long-idle piffawmer raced out of his 47th St. hotel and kept running until he reached the East River. Then, while poised on the edge of a dock, he proceeded to remove his clothes.

"Just a minute," said one of two guys, whose heads bobbed up out of the water. "Are you an actor?"

"Yeah," was the answer.

"Okay," retorted the others, "come on in!"

OF ALL CHUMPS

THEY were trying to say that the radio has made many stars out of mediocrities and offered for example this incident. The scene was at Gimbel's place and the party contained most of the principals from the "Buns o' Guns" show. The radio was on and the announcer said that any request would be complied with at once so David Hutcheson of the show telephoned to the broadcasting station. "My name is David Hutcheson," said David, "we are at Mr. Gimbel's party and Jack Donahue, Lily Damita, Bill Frawley and Mary Horan from the 'Sons o' Guns' show are here. Will you kindly oblige with 'Why?' the hit song from 'Sons o' Guns?' The man said he would. A few minutes later this is how he announced it over the ether: "There is a party on at Mr. Whimple's place and David Ruchinson phoned to say that Jack McGonigle, Willie Hameter, Harry Moran and Bill McCawley were there and that they all would like to hear 'Sons o' Guns,' the hit song from 'Why?'"

WESTERN UNION MESSENGER NO. 1869 just delivered a telegram to this desk, and he paused long enough to say that he felt like 17 although he really is 35. He goes to Columbia's School of Journalism and has written several articles for several success magazines and now is competing for the Yale Review award. His name is David Bloom and he wants to be a reporter, he says, and the reason he is a messenger boy is, "Where can even people with white collars meet the people I meet? I meet such great people like Ziegfeld and Ed Wynn—and not only do I meet such people, but I talk to them!"

We wish Mr. Bloom well, but when he is a reporter he will find out that he'll be damned if he prints it and be damned if he doesn't, as F. P. A. would say.

ADD SIMILES

Ben Brookside's: "As clever as a columnist tries to be."

IMAGINE!

WE have just discovered what probably is the only female bouncer in town in a fashionable Park Ave. hooch-house. The place is frequented by swells and debutantes, but now and then "Bunnies" are brought in by "those bankers." A "Bunnie," it appears, is a stenographer with no class. The other night one "Bunnie" got giggly during a star's song specialty and the bouncer grabbed her by the neck and hurled her down a flight of stairs.

"Golly!" we golly'd, "that's pretty rough stuff, isn't it?"

"No it isn't," replied the femme bouncer, "we haven't a man bouncer because it takes a woman to handle an objectionable woman and when a woman or man annoys others in here they soon learn that there are only two steps leading to the exit—the top step and the bottom one!"

WHAT THE CRITICS SAID

ACCORDING to the advertisements in the amusement pages, the Dailynooz cinema critic said of Harry Richman: "Richman has a voice that sings via the microphone like a million dollars."

The Greffic's movie oracle was more conservative. She observed: "He puts over his songs like a million dollars."

As if either critic knows what a billion or a million dollars is like.

TRAVELS 7,000 MILES IN TWENTY DAYS FOR ROLE

Ilse Marvenga, prima donna of "Naughty Marietta," coming to the Alvin for one week, beginning Monday evening, traveled 7,000 miles in less than 20 days in the course of her professional activities. While she was appearing in London in "The Student Prince," she received a cablegram: "Leave on the next steamer for New York. You are to open in San Francisco in 'The Student Prince' in 20 days." Ilse telephoned her mother in Bremen, Germany, and hastily packed up her possessions and was sailing for New York on the Berengaria within 48 hours. As Miss Marvenga stepped off the boat in New York she was rushed to the depot, where she took a train to the Pacific Coast, and with only one rehearsal she opened in a San Francisco theater.

"Hot Chocolate," Negro musical revue, opens a week's engagement in the Nixon Monday. "Jazzlips" Richardson is the star performer.

The plot of "Laff That Off," which the George Sharp Players announce for next week in the Pitt, has to do with three young men, a vaudeville actor and two reporters, who are living in lodgings, and who adopt an unknown and pretty young woman as a member of their "gang," with the promise that none of them shall make love to her. Naturally all three proceed to do so, which makes the play.

Filling Catching Gaps.
Good Material Found.
Bespectacled Players.
Meadows Winning Job.
McCarthy's Problems.
Race for Ring Title.

MANY YOUNG BACKSTOPS WILL STICK

THE need for capable new catching material was a source of worry to a number of major league baseball managers when the spring training season opened. Several pilots admitted that their chief problem would be the filling of holes in the backstopping department, and that the prospects of their teams for the year would depend largely upon their success in acquiring or developing additional receivers of ability.

Al Bool

Judging from the reports that are coming in from the various practice camps, the majority of the skippers who were seeking young maskmen possessing big league qualifications have been successful in their quests. Of course, the recruits have yet to face the test of actual championship competition, and some of them may fail to measure up to requirements after the real season begins, but from present indications more new catchers will be retained for the start of the campaign than has been the case in a number of years.

IT IS a foregone conclusion, seemingly, that Pittsburgh will keep Al Bool, Baltimore recruit, regardless of what decisions may be reached as to Johnny O'Connell and Hal Finney. The Giants believe they have picked up a comer in Frank Healy, a semi-pro from Holyoke, the Phillies are singing the praises of Al Cooper, from Birmingham, and the Dodgers have a certain fixture in Alfonso Lopez, an Atlanta rookie of Spanish descent.

In the American League, the Tigers head the list with a pair of promising recruits in George Rensa, from Toronto, and Bill Steinecke, from Seattle. The Yankees will cling to Bill Karlon, from Springfield, Mass., and the White Sox see a bright future for Johnny Riddle, from Indianapolis. Several of the other clubs are expected to announce shortly additions to the list of catching candidates who will be retained. All around, signs point to an unusual fat harvest in this particular department.

ART FLETCHER and Charley O'Leary, Yankee coaches, were discussing New York's star players of the past and present in the two major leagues, and at the suggestion of John Kieran consented to pick two all-time teams.

Fletcher made up the Giant list, and O'Leary did the choosing on the Yankee side. They confined their selections to the period during which the American League has been in the field and did not go back to the days of Buck Ewing and other stars.

Art Fletcher

HERE is Fletcher's idea of the best all-time Giant club: Catcher, Roger Bresnahan; pitchers (one right-hander and one left-hander), Christy Mathewson and Rube Marquard; first base, Bill Terry; second base, Frankie Frisch; third base, Arthur Devlin; shortstop, toss-up between Dave Bancroft and Travis Jackson; left field, George Burns; center field, Eddie Roush; right field, Ross Young. O'Leary picked these Yanks: Catcher, Wally Schang; pitchers, Russell Ford and Herb Pennock; first base, Hal Chase; second base, Tony Lazzeri; third base, Joe Dugan; shortstop, Roger Peckinpaugh; left field, Babe Ruth; center field, Earl Combs; right field, Willie Keeler.

THE Pirates were thought to have set some kind of record when they had two bespectacled players at one time in Pitchers Lee Meadows and Carmen Hill. Last fall the Cardinals tied them, for though George Toporcer had gone the acquisition of Hill from Pittsburgh gave the Redbirds a pair in Hill and Outfielder Chick Hafey.

This spring the Cards have gone the previous record two better by presenting no fewer than four players who wear spectacles while in action on the field. In addition to Hafey and Hill, they have Willis Glasgow, a shortstop, and Harold Bruckman, a catcher. Before the spring exhibitions are ended, Bruckman is to go behind the bat when Hill is pitching, forming the first bespectacled battery ever known.

SPEAKING of players who wear "cheaters," there appears to be a good chance that Lee Meadows will be sufficiently successful in his attempted come-back to be taken on, for a time, at least, as a pitcher for the Dodgers. The former Pirate has impressed Manager Robinson as being still a better pitcher than most of the recruits, and it is said a contract soon will be tendered to him.

Joe McCarthy

Meadows says the lameness in his pitching arm, which caused his drop to the minors last season, has disappeared, and he thinks he can win in the National League this year if given a fair chance.

WHILE the entire Cub camp is reported to see no chance in the world for any other club to keep the Bruins from repeating for the pennant this year, Manager Joe McCarthy admits that he'd feel a whole lot safer if he could find another pitcher capable of doing regular duty. He rates Charley Root, Pat Malone and Guy Bush as sure shots, but unless Sheriff Blake does a come-back, McCarthy may have to depend upon a minor league recruit, Lynn Nelson or Malcolm Moss, for the fourth regular pitching assignment, and what either can do in fast company is still a question.

MCARTHY is also in a quandary about his batting order. For a time, as he did a year ago, he considered the advisability of using Hazen Cuyler as lead-off man, but while feeling sure of Cuyler he had his doubts as to the ability of Woody English to perform satisfactorily in the second notch.

Besides, Joe said he preferred a left-hand batter behind Cuyler, and Charley Grimm, his only regular of that type, appeared to be too slow of foot to bat second. At that, he is now giving Grimm a tryout as second hitter, with English batting first and Cuyler fifth. If Grimm shows up well, Cuyler may be lifted to the top of the order later, though the chances seem to favor the eventual dropping of Grimm to his old post at seventh, where he won't be splitting the club's speed.

MONDAY looked like anything but St. Patrick's Day in New York boxing circles, with a pair of Jewish boys, Al Singer and Eddie (Kid) Wagner, featuring the main show of the night, and only two Irish boys appearing among the eight others on the card. A few years back a fistic bill on such a night would have been suggestive of Erin from top to bottom.

But something that may make up for it will be offered at Rockland Palace in New York next Monday night. It is an all-Irish am-

DUQUESNE FIVE BOWS, 38-35, IN FINAL

By JESS CARVER.

Out of the sizzling conflict of the annual W. P. I. A. L. championship basketball elimination tourney has risen a champion deserving of the name . . . a champion of the sort that goes best when the sailing is the toughest. That champion, New Kensington, crowned ruler of the league for a year as it defeated Duquesne in the tourney finale in the Pitt Stadium last night, by a count of 38-34, gave one of the bravest exhibitions of the old fight that makes champions that it has been Pittsburgh's privilege to witness for y'ars and y'ars. Or even longer!

Babe Dayoub

What ever else he may accomplish in this life, and from what if known of him, in the past, that will be plenty, Paul Glock, coach of the Allegheny valley school, has taught his boys to swim against the current. And THAT IS something! You know the old saying—"any poor fish can swim down stream . . ." For the third time in the tourney, New Kensington proved that it could paddle UP as well, and what is more to the point, did so.

MEETS SHARON NEXT

Now the Section I entry, which has written its name on the list of W. P. I. A. L. champions for the first time in 18 years, goes to Grove City to meet Sharon for the Northwestern title Friday night and the right to take part in the state finals next week.

One would not have offered a plugged jitney for New Kensington's chances at the end of the first half last night. The team looked worse than it had in any previous game. And at the end of the third period, you wouldn't have given much more for Duquesne's chances. That is the sort of a ball game that Bob Zuppke and 4,000 others saw last evening.

New Kensington not only had to put on two splendid, breath-taking rallies of its own to win, but had to stave off a desperate, but never-the-less, dangerous attack by Duquesne, which tied the score with less than three minutes to play. Ain't 'at somethin'?

DUKES START FAST

Duquesne started in a fashion that put the proverbial house on fire to complete shame. The Section VII leaders were ahead by 13 to 8 at the end of the opening period, and duplicating their score in the second, with New Kensington barely able to do the same, led by 26 to 16 at the half. The Dukes were looking the part of champs, their shots were dropping for 'em and their plays were working properly, Donie Beck had four baskets, Harapas had as many and Shulte, the big guard, had a trio.

Ames was keeping New Kensington in the game, as much as possible, with three goals. Wilson had a pair and Dayoub one.

Then came that third quarter. Led by the dark-haired center, Uhlan (Babe) Dayoub, the star of the contest, New Kensington started, and by rushing the Dukes completely off their feet, outpassing 'em and improving their defense to unimaginable proportions, actually held the enemy scoreless, meanwhile running up a dozen points themselves and taking a two-point lead at 28-26 as the final period got underway.

DAYOUB BIG STAR

Dayoub's foul and his two field goals put the Ken-Hiers in front.

YESTERDAY'S EXPLANATIONS: The Suicide Oak—This famous oak tree stands in the City Park, New Orleans. Under its branches 16 people have committed suicide. New Orleans has no graveyard because the dampness of the ground prohibits burial below the surface. All inhumation in New Orleans is done in vaults and mausoleums. DON FELIX D'AZARA WAITED 20 YEARS—After the peace of Ildefonso, the Spanish and Portuguese governments agreed to send a personal representation to the Paraguay-Brazilian border to settle their boundary dispute on the spot. Don Felix D'Azara was the delegate of the Spanish government who was despatched to South America with such haste that he could take no luggage with him. The Portuguese delegates for Brazil never arrived and Don Felix waited 20 years in vain for them. Having nothing to do in the meantime, he devoted his time to a thorough study of the local fauna. He is considered an authority on mammals.

BRANNON BOXES JOEY GOODMAN

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Eddie Brannon, Negro lightweight hope, of the Hill, gets his chance to display his wares against a top-notch fighter tonight in the 10-round main bout of the third show to be held in Duquesne Garden. His opponent is none other than Joey Goodman, of Cleveland, who in two other starts here has impressed the fans with his ability.

Eddie Brannon

Goodman knocked out Henry Perlick, of Kalamazoo, Mich., at Motor Square Garden in his first appearance here. Then he won handily over Maxie Strub, of Erie, at the Moose Temple and since then he has fought a very good 12-round bout with Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, in Cleveland.

There are some fans who believe Brannon has been overmatched in tonight's show, but Eddie's manager, Mike Ray, thinks his protege is ready for the best of them and that he will demonstrate this fact against Goodman.

Three six-round bouts make up the preliminary card. Tommy Ward, of the South Side, boxes Dominick Profio, of Cecil, in the semi-final; Johnny Haggerty, of Lawrenceville, and Young Nanci, of Swissvale, meet in the second bout and George Evans, of Braddock, and Jimmy Thomas, of the Hill, are in the opener.

Between Rounds

Billy Jones and Charley Belanger, lightheavies, box at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., tonight in a bout postponed from last week.

The McKeesport card for tomorrow night has been completed with the exception of the opening bout. Chuck Forte and Harry Williams clash in the windup. Teddy Welch and Freddie Edwards in the

ZUPPKE RAPS FOUNDATION

Three hundred chairs were pushed back, and 300 well-filled vests patted last night, as Bob Zuppke capped the climax of a splendid W. P. I. A. L. banquet at Webster Hall with a rousing speech, in which he took a pot shot or two at the Carnegie Foundation report and defended intercollegiate sport.

A fine turnout of high school principals, superintendents and coaches greeted the famous Illinois coach, developer of the great Red Grange and, withal, smart Dutch philosopher, and after he had given them his talk, escorted him to the New Kensington-Duquesne championship game in the Pitt Stadium.

Coach Zuppke's chief complaint against the Carnegie Foundation was that the men who handled its investigation did so without realizing the tremendous task that confronted them, and tried to complete a task in a few years that it would take a much better trained and greater force thrice that time to accomplish.

"Allowances must be made," said Zuppke, "for the viewpoints of those scholarly gentlemen of the Foundation. They look at things from a different viewpoint than those who are continually in the athletic and collegiate life."

It was not the investigation and the report itself that was wrong, added Zuppke, but the way in which those behind it went about their task.

Coach Zuppke left last night for Cleveland, where he is to make an address tonight.

Legion Bowlers To Meet Tonight

American Legion bowlers from all sections of Allegheny County will be among the contestants in the annual Allegheny County American Legion tournament scheduled tonight at the Haus alleys on the North Side.

Ben H. Giffen, athletic chairman of the County Legion, announces a fine entry list, and some good scores are anticipated.

DOEG PLAYS PARE

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 19.—(AP.)—John Doeg, Santa Monica, Cal., advanced into the semi-finals of the South Eastern tennis championship by defeating Kenneth Stewart, Jacksonville, 6-1, 8-1, yesterday. Today Doeg meets Emmett Pare, National clay court singles champion, in the semi-final match. Pare eliminated Lorimer Butch, 6-1, 6-0.

SHIRES ISSUES ULTIMATUM

DALLAS, Tex., March 19.—(AP.)—Art Shires, holdout first sacker of the Chicago White Sox, has issued an ultimatum. Unless a better offer than the $7,000 contract tendered him early in the season is forthcoming in a week the Bad Boy of Baseball threatens to play semi-pro ball, either in Chicago or in the Rio Grande Valley.

At his home in Italy, Tex., Shires said he had received a number of attractive propositions from semi-professional clubs.

Wheeling, W. Va., this spring will stage its Golden Jubilee horse racing meet under the auspices of the West Virginia State Fair Association . . . . It will be a 15-day affair, running from April 9 to 26, and will mark the fiftieth anniversary of the association . . . . FINNEY, GREEN, W. MEINE GO TO COLUMBIA

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 19.—Three young Pirates were dropped today as the Buccos prepared to take on the hard-hitting Mission Reds in the second game of the series.

The trio of recruits who will leave the Buccaneer camp tonight are still members of the big Pirate family, but they will serve in the capacity of farm hands for several months at least. They are Pitchers Walter Meine and Ivan Green and Catcher Hal Finney.

Heinie Meine

The three were ordered to join the Columbia club of the South Atlantic League, this team being controlled by the Pittsburgh owners. In making the announcement this morning, the Pirate officials outlined a distinction in the release. Finney was announced as being optioned to Columbia, while the other two will be the exclusive property of the Columbia team, but as the Sally League member is the exclusive property of the Pirates, the effect is the same.

The qualification was necessary owing to the laws of the sport. Neither W. Meine nor Green were signed to any contracts when they reported here. The former is the kid brother of Heinie Meine and he was ordered to camp with the understanding that the Pirates would try to land him a berth, provided he impressed Manager Ens. Green landed with the team under similar arrangements, he being sponsored by George Grantham. The youngster and Grantham reside in Phoenix.

FINNEY PROMOTED

Finney caught splendid ball in the Georgia-Alabama League last season and is being farmed out under the customary regulations. Hal is a strapping lad for whom

N. KENSINGTON COPS TITLE

Then he proceeded to keep 'em there.

Held scoreless in the third period, Duquesne tied the count early in the fourth when Beck made two foul shots good. Ames stepped back into the picture for New Kensington with a field goal to restore the lead. Laughlin added a point at the free throw line. McCandless popped one that made it 35-28, with only three minutes to go.

But do you think Duquesne was entirely out of the picture? Not a bit of it. Almost in the time it takes to tell it, or rather to write it, Beck flung two field goals and Shulte one, to put the Dukes within a point of the leaders. The score then was 35-34.

Coach Glock has a distinct distaste for the "freezing" type of game, and with a one-point lead, refused to let his team hold the ball in the back court. Instead he sent them out to score, which they did in no uncertain fashion, Dayoub finding the Duquesne defense scattered and he dribbled down the floor and hooked in his seventh basket. A play or two later, Wilson was fouled as he attempted the same thing, and he made one out of the two free ones, establishing a four-point advantage which never faded.

BIG CROWD

A crowd easily as great as any that ever jammed its way into the Stadium Pavilion was on hand for the game. It cheered the sparkling Dayoub, who's seven field goals and four fouls gave him an 18-point total for the evening, to the very limit. It was gracious in its applause of the vanquished . . . but, you all know how the crowd loves a winner.

Harapas, star of the Dukes against New Castle, was a big shot for the first half, but in the second might as well have been on the bench. He did get there finally, leaving the game with four personals for his record. Donie Beck played well, but his floor work was not up to snuff, and on more than one occasion, Whitey Wilson, crack forward of the victors, took the ball from him as he attempted to dribble. They gave him a set shot or two in the first half, which he made, but in the second, had him tied up as tight as tight can be. The lineup:

N. Kensington—38		Duquesne—34
Wilson	F	Beck
McCandless	F	Harapas
Dayoub	C	Davis
Ames	G	Schulte
Laughlin	G	Shultz

Score by periods:

New Kensington	9	6	13	10—38
Duquesne	11	13	5	5—34

Substitutes: Duquesne—Mack for Harapas, Field goals: Wilson 3, McCandless, Dayoub 7, Ames 5, Beck 4, Harapas 4, Shultz 2, Davis. Fouls—Wilson, 1 out of 2; Dayoub, 4 out of 6, Ames, 0 out of 1; Laughlin, 1 out of 2, Beck, 2 out of 4; Harapas, 2 out of 3, Davis, 0 out of 1. Team fouls—New Kensington, 6 out of 15; Duquesne, 4 out of 7. Time of periods, 8 minutes. Referee—Biggs Snyder. Umpire — Ely Brickley.

The Tipoff

Graduate Managers Quintet of Carnegie Tech, and Hotchak, of Duquesne University, to take charge of Bob Zuppke while he is in town yesterday. They eat bagels now at the game in the Stadium in the evening and saw to it that his plate was well filled at the banquet.

Zuppke praised the fight and comeback spirit of the New Kensington team after the game. "It all goes to prove that you have to win both halves of a ball game to come out on top," was Zupp's dry comment.

Among those at the Webster Hall affair, and there was plenty there, were Moe Rubenstein, Jock Rosenberg, Bill Cann, Bell, Tuffy McGillis, Fred Miller, Nate Lloyd, A. Weinman, Leland Schlagheck and Carl Ray, Carl Lorch and Bill Evans of the coaching fraternity.

Those listed among the school men were Dave Stewart, Myers Horner, R. S. Smith, Samuel Faupel, H. P. Weaver, J. W. Brown, F. C. Cope, W. Lantz, J. Foster Gehrig and G. W. Cassler.

No team has ever put on more hair raising last half finishes in the W. P. I. A. L. tournaments than New Kensington Black's team came from behind in the last period to beat Aliquippa, played four over-time sessions with Jeannette, and then put that one on last night against the Dukes.

Assistant football coach Andy Gustafson of Pitt, represented the Oakland University, occupying a seat in the gallery. He missed getting anything to eat, but got to watch the other boys put it away.

New Kensington's victory, coming as it did, caused Rob Carlson to remark: "This fellow Glock must put in a lot of time pulling rabbits out of hats."

NO. 2—CHANGE OF PACE FOR PITCHERS

Somehow, Eddie couldn't seem to get the idea in throwing his change of pace. Either he would grip the ball too tightly when he pitched it or he would loosen up too soon in his delivery and give the whole thing away.

"Listen Eddie," I told him. "You pitch the change of pace just the same as a fast ball. You grip the ball the same way and use the same motion. The only difference is that you don't use the wrist snap and just before you let the ball go you loosen your grip so that it slides off your thumb and little finger."

"But when I loosen my grip that way I don't have any control," he argued.

"Well," I told him, "that's where practice comes in. Even big league stars can't learn to pitch a change of pace over night. It takes them weeks to get control—and it takes them weeks, too, to learn to cover up their pitch. You've got to remember that a change of pace is good only as a fooler—and to fool a hitter you've got to grip that ball tight right up to the last second. If you change your grip too soon you give the whole thing away."

Mac watched all the time and he got a great laugh out of Eddie's efforts to throw the ball.

Finally Eddie got it down.

He was as excited as could be. "Why the ball don't twist a bit," he yelled. "It just floats."

"Sure," I told him. "That's the idea. Instead of twisting and gathering speed like a fast ball, it just sort of floats up there, revolving so slowly that you almost can count the stiches on it. It's the lack of rotation that make it wobble and fall away."

Mac got as much kick out of the thing as Eddie did.

"Now that he knows how to throw that thing what's he going to do with it?" he asked. "When does he use it?"

"Well," I explained. "The change of pace is just a fooler. You mix it up with a fast ball to throw the hitters off balance. If a hitter is expecting a fast ball and you throw him a slow one it throws him clear off his stride. He swings too soon and fouls up, or misses the ball entirely, or maybe hits a weak grounder to the infield."

Mac wasn't satisfied yet, however.

"I know that," he said, "but the way Eddie throws that thing it's a dead giveaway. He's got a regular delivery for his fast one, but that slow thing he throws like a girl."

"The trouble there is that he's throwing too much with his elbow," I told him. "You've got to throw that slow ball the same as your fast one, the grip is the only difference."

(That's what we were trying to show when the man took the picture.)

"Keep that arm straight at the time you let the ball go," I told him. "That does two things. It keeps you from giving away the pitch and it keeps your arm from getting sore. If you throw a slow ball with your elbow you'll soon know it. For your arm will get so sore you won't be able to throw anything for awhile."

After all, there are only a few things to remember about a change of pace. Use the same motion you use on your fast ball—loosen up your grip at the finish. After that it's just a question of practice until you get control.

JOE DUNDEE STOPPED

ATLANTA, March 19.—(INS.)—Ted Goodrich, Atlanta welterweight, today held a technical knockout victory over Joe Dundee, of Baltimore, former champion.

While the stocky Italian stood in his own corner, too dazed to defend himself, Referee Battling Budd raised the arm of Goodrich in victory.

The decisive blow came early in the second round. Goodrich jabbed at Dundee's face with a left, and, as the Baltimorean jerked his head away, the Atlanta mauler sent a right to the chin.

Dundee spun around and sagged into the ropes. He took a count of nine and rose. Then Goodrich drove him across the ring with a rain of blows. Again Dundee sagged to the ropes, helpless, and Charley Johnston, his manager, came over and shouted: "Take nine." Then the referee intervened.

Facts and Fancies About Our New Bucs

NO. 14—LARRY FRENCH, PITCHER

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18.—His rating around the National League circuit is unusually high, yet Larry French is one of the youngest of the big squad of Pirate pitchers with the team in California. Perhaps he doesn't exactly fit into this rookie series, but there's a lot about him that remains to be told.

French, cut from the Art Shires pattern, had to have some spunk to survive the ordeals which he faced in the Pacific Coast League as a youngster of 18.

Larry French

"We had one of those rough-and-ready managers who also was somewhat of a killer," exclaimed French. "Well, I was anxious to do what I was told and when he advised me not to take anything from anybody I thought he was in earnest, but I later figured he was spoofing me.

"The first day out, I took a swing at another young player. Where he came from they swing at each other, so I found myself right in the middle of a swell fight with a man who now is one of my best friends in baseball. His name is Charley Berry, now of the Red Sox, but I guess you folks of Pennsylvania know a lot about Charley. Anyhow, he's a grand fellow and I think our no-decision affair made us better friends.

"That was only one of three battles I had when I joined the Portland club, but I guess no harm came from any of them, and here I am in the big leagues ready to do my best.

"I wanted to be a doctor when I was in high school, but the jig was up and the medical profession lost a clever lefthanded surgeon when yours truly found out he could fool some pretty fair hitters with a baseball.

"Lyn Lary, Yankee infielder, and I were born and reared in Visalia. You bet it's in California and you can find it if you can find a map large enough. Lyn and I attended school together, played on the same team, went to the Coast League and then moved ahead to the big show."

French entered the University of California, where he studied for more than a year. In his second term he left the Berkley institution to enter Oregon Agricultural College. It seems that one of Larry's rich ancestors had donated this school to the commonwealth and in recognition of the grant the state decreed that any descendants of the donor could have free tuition. But Larry's fame as a high school pitcher had spread and when Portland made him an offer he left his grandsire's seat of learning flat to go in for the art of the diamond.

A courteous, well-mannered youth, French also has that quality that would bring forth admiration in the breasts of the oldtimers who traveled the bases with spikes sharp and high.

The Pirates were playing a game with the Yankees at Houston last spring. It was only an exhibition game, but French wanted to make a showing. He started out by throwing one at the Bambino's head and then fanned him. When Babe came up again he went down again and once more missed a third strike. It was sort of fresh, but Larry thought it was quite the thing to do.

A few days ago, French started a game of the camp series at Paso Robles. He had a lot of stuff. Umpire Ted McGrew was asked for an expression on French's fast ball and he complimented the youth to the questioner.

French later was advised that Umpire McGrew had spoken highly of his ability. Like a flash he came back with:

"He did, did he! Well, why in h—l did he want to miss those corner pitches the way he did?"

He'll get by.—CHARLES J. DOYLE.

After 18 years as head track coach at the University of Michigan, good old Steve Farrell is retiring permanently from the game.

Back in the old days of professional running, Steve was one of those rare avis, an honest footrunner. He won the Sheffield Handicap in England when that was the classic foot-race of the world, running the 120 yards in 11 3-5 seconds.

Knute Rockne.

On several occasions, Steve raced against a horse and at the longer distances.

When professional foot-racing lost favor, Steven went into the track coaching profession at the University of Maine, where he had instant success. From Maine he went to Ohio State, and 18 years ago he transferred to Anr. Arbor.

His track teams have been constantly at the top. But what means more to old Steve, no doubt, is the fact that no young man ever has run under him but feels very kindly and has the highest respect for him. That his fatherly interest was an influence for good and that his homespun philosophy and his Spartan formula for physical fitness made him an invaluable member of the teaching fraternity no one appreciates more than the boys who knew him and competed under him. He is even loved by his rival coaches, and this is the highest word of praise that any man can receive.

FORT ERIE, Ontario, March 19.—(AP.)—Detroit defeated Pittsburgh, 4-2, in a National League hockey game here last night. The contest was dull until the last three minutes of play when the Cougars opened up with an attack that netted two goals. It was the Pirates' final game of the season.

The Cougars scored their second equalizer when Miller endeavored to clear a shot from McCabe and it struck the stick of Barton, rebounding into the net.

The Pirates were first to score, Drury taking Barton's pass. McCabe equalized with Cooper's pass in the second period and then the Pirates went into the lead on another goal by Drury. At this stage came the unusual shot. In the closing scoring spasm Aurie, then Lewis, tallied for the winners. The lineup:

GENEVA PLANS NIGHT SPORTS

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., March 19.—Night football and track will be inaugurated by Geneva College this year. This announcement was made here today when A. C. Edgecombe, director of athletics, announced that the college had definitely decided to install floodlights at Reeves Field this spring.

It is hoped the installation will be completed in time for the first Geneva track meet which is scheduled for Saturday, April 19, with West Virginia University. In case the lights are ready by then, the West Virginia meet probably will be switched to Friday evening, April 18. Edgecombe also plans to stage the annual Beaver Valley high school championship at night. This meet is scheduled for May 17.

At least five of the Covenanter football games will be staged at night next fall. Director Edgecombe has secured permission from all the teams Geneva will meet throughout October to stage the games at night. This includes the opener with St. Vincent's September 19, Canisius on October 3, Waynesburg, October 17; Grove City, on October 24, and Franklin and Marshall, October 31. Other games may be switched to night as conditions permit.

The night football system has the approval of Coach Howard Harpster.

SWIMMING SENSATION

HELENE MADISON

Miss Madison, 16-year-old swimming sensation from Seattle, Wash., was the star of the five-day National A. A. U. championship meet at Miami, Fla., just completed. Making her first appearance in a national meet, she stole the spotlight from all other contestants by setting four world records. Yesterday, at Jacksonville, Fla., she added six more world records in a single exhibition, the marks ranging from 200 to 500 yards.

PIRATES DROP THREE ROOKIES

big things are expected. His new job represents a promotion, as the Sally is a Class B circuit and one that ranks with some of the Glass A belts.

Walter Meine and Green are two big righthanded hustlers who are expected to develop in the Dixie circuit. Neither had had any professional experience, but both were slab standouts about rookie hurlers in camp.

Marty Fiedler, manager of the Johnstown club last year, left the Pirate camp a few days ago to assume his new task as manager of the Columbia club. Marty worked out with the Buccos, and he expects to play third base for Columbia.

All of which, however, has little or nothing to do with the severe pasting sustained by the Pirates yesterday in the first battle of their annual series in San Francisco. Red Killefer's Missions made our boys look like a minor league outfit as they hung an 8-to-5 black eye on the big leaguers.

PETTY GOES BAD

Jess Petty was one of the principal casualties. In his first appearance off the Paso Robles orchard, the Silver Fox did not get very far. Petty started out impressive by taking three men in the first inning, but he threw a lot of home run balls in the second and third rounds and the eight resultant runs upset the Pirates, while something like 4,000 lovers of the game cheered lustily. It's always a great treat when the home boys knock off the big-timers.

The hero of the scrap was a tall, well-mannered veteran who in this particular game looked like the best first baseman in the sport, George Burns, for many years a star in the American League, was making his debut before San Francisco fans. George smeared Petty for two homers in succession, his hitting two liners into the left field bleachers. On defense he looked like a combination of Earl Sheely and Charley Grimm, his fielding reaching a climax when he grounded George Grantham on a ball which George spanked to the first sacker. Burns had to go around by way of second, but the veteran was able to get the ball to that bag and then place his foot on the gateway to retire Grantham as the ball was whizzed back to him.

Other homers were struck by Stuart Clarke of the Pirates and Fuzzy Hufft of the Reds. Stewie found the range on the left field bleachers in the ninth with Suhr on the sacks.

semi-final and Georgie Bratsch and Casey Hayes in the second event.

Many tickets have been sold for the benefit amateur show to be held for the striking taxicab drivers in Duquesne Garden tomorrow night, and the committee looks for a packed house.

The second annual boxing championship tournament of the Boys' Club of Pittsburgh is scheduled for tomorrow and Friday nights in the club's gymnasium, 4411 Butler street.

Promoter Francis Flynn has completed the bill for his show in the Moose Temple Friday night with the signing of Mickey Hart, of New Kensington, and Frankie Lane, of Sharpsburg, featherweights, to box the six-round opening bout. Buck McTiernan and Johnny Fiel meet in the windup. Cowboy DeLuca and Hans Roberts in the semi-final and Billy Schoice and Peaches Gallagher in the second battle, a return match.

The Jolly Bowl at New Castle last Monday drew one of its largest gates for the Emmett Rocco-Al Friedman heavyweight battle. The receipts were $5,061. The record at the Bowl is $5,107.50, drawn by Willie Davies and Midget Weigart last summer.

Joey Abrams, of New York, has been matched to box Maxie Strub, of Erie, and Frankie Stevens, of Boston, to oppose Tug Phillips, of Erie, in a double windup offering of two 10-round bouts at Erie Friday night. Heavy Andrews, of Erie, boxes Harry Freeman, of Syracuse, in the six-rounder, and, in two four-round preliminaries, Matty Oldach, of Erie, boxes Whitey Stevenson, also of Erie, while Joe Rider, of Erie, faces Young Hernando, of Warren, O. Jack Barry, former local boxer, is the matchmaker for the club.

The 44-round boxing show scheduled at Lorain, O., last Monday night, with Joe Schmid and Eddie Kaufman in the main bout, was postponed until next Monday night.

Johnny Datto, Filipino featherweight, of Cleveland, boxes Ernie Mandell at Providence, R. I., Friday night.

Between revings over his 18-year-old wonder, Charley Baxter, Charles Jones, of Louisville, and formerly of McKeesport, writes that he has Midget Mike O'Dowd all readied up for another shot at Jackie Rodgers any time the local knockout king is ready to take him on. A little more than a year ago, Mike dropped Rodgers and defeated him handily in a 10-rounder at Motor Square Garden. Johnny Erickson, of New York, also kicks in with a challenge directed at Rodgers. Erickson has boxed Kid Chocolate twice and meets him again Friday of next week in Montreal. He also has boxed Vidal Gregorio twice and Teddy Baldock, among others.

James (Red) Mason, part manager of Jackie Rodgers, in a telephone conversation from Chicago this morning announced that Rodgers scaled only 133½ pounds at the conclusion of his workout there yesterday for his bout with Henry Hart at Motor Square Garden next Monday night. Jackie will leave by train Friday night and will arrive here Saturday morning and indulge in final light drills Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Mason and Johnny Drotach, Rodgers' other manager, will return by automobile, leaving Chicago Friday morning.

Maxie Rosenbloom and Larry Johnson may be rematched for the Chicago Stadium, March 28. Ace Hudkins having just turned down a bout with Johnson there. Rosenbloom recently won on a foul over Johnson in New York.

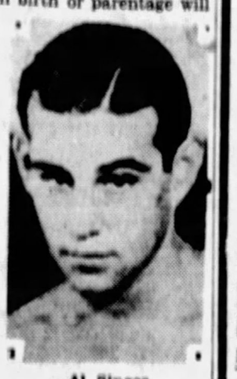
ateur glove tournament. Only boxers of Irish birth or parentage will be allowed to enter, the affair being held for the benefit of a home for Irish emigrant girls. Some of the contestants will be boys from the boxing classes conducted at Grupp's gymnasium in New York by Tommy Burns, former heavyweight champion. Burns believes that a top-notch Irish heavyweight is needed to bring back the million-dollar gate, and is out to develop one, if possible.



Al Singer

ONE listic title that appears certain to change hands before 1930 passes out is the world championship in the lightweight class. But whether Al Singer, of New York, or Jack (Kid) Berg, of England, will be the one to snatch the crown from the brow of Sammy Mandell, or at least to qualify for a shot at it, is a question. Berg was looming big when he went back to England for a visit, but Singer's work in the meantime has swung the pendulum slightly in Al's favor. Eddie (Kid) Wagner is no longer a youngster, yet it takes a mighty good boy to beat him decisively, and in putting him away in three rounds Monday night Singer gave new evidence that it is going to be a hard matter for Mandell, or Berg or anybody else to keep him from reaching the top. As a spectacle, and a tough fight, a match between Singer and Berg would be just as good as any championship match that could be arranged.

N. Y. Commission Adopts New Foul Rule

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Stringent regulations designed to reduce the number of bouts ending on fouls have been adopted by the New York State Athletic Commission.

Hereafter, boxers losing on fouls will draw a suspension of two months for the first offense; four months for the second; six months for the third, and life for the fourth. Boxers who foul will be paid only for the completed rounds before the disqualification. The remainder of the purse will be turned over to the promoter.

James A. Farley, chairman of the commission, said: "Fouls and unsatisfactory endings of the bouts are choking the boxing game to death."

CHICAGO, March 19.—(AP.)—Illinois may follow the action of the New York State Athletic Commission in adopting a drastic boxing foul rule.

E. E. CARDINALS TO HAVE GOOD BALL CLUB

By TOM BIRKS

Realizing that plenty of real competition is going to be met in the Eastern section of the Steel City League, Manager Russ Prata of the East End Cardinals kicks in with the list of players who will bear the brunt of the campaign against the Hale Club, Crimsons, Lincoln Place, Golden Indians, and the Star Circle Club of Bloomfield.

The East End Cardinals, now in their fourth year, always have been championship contenders, and this season the Cards feel that the Scarlet and White should represent the Eastern section against the Western in the title playoffs.

GOLDMAN TO ASSIST

Assisting Prata in the running of the club will be Leonard Goldman, Nick Prata will be the treasurer, and Ignace Mojcikiewic is secretary. Practically all of last season's club will be back. Don (Boon) Gorman, Bob Paisley, Jimmy Arrigo and Jus Fest will carry the pitching burden, this quartet stacking up with any pitching staff in the light first class ranks.

Walter Newport, Billy Eber and Eddie Goll will assume the catching duties, while Bill Ryan, Bill Pape, Frank Tyson, Johnny Hurley, Tom Birks, Jr., Freddie Becketts and Bernard McMahon are out trying to fill the infield and outfield jobs. Fest and Beckett are the only new members of the club.

ACES LOOK GOOD

In keeping with his usual policy, Jack Fettig, mentor of the Homestead Aces, will be one of the first sandlot managers to get the boys out in the sliding pits. The training site at Locust Grove again will be used. The Aces squad will be unusually large this spring. Newcomers, however, will be given every chance to show their stuff.

Two of the younger players to be watched closely are O'Pell and another member of the Henderson family.

That the Aces will stack up as big contenders for West Penn honors is assured with Jimmy Henderson behind the bat, Garvey will be at third, Walker at short, Forquer at second and Kick on the initial sack.

The outfield will find Simko Renquist, Kelly, Neville and Popp fighting it out for the berths. Little need be said regarding the splendid pitching staff, with Douds, Steimer, Anderson, Johnny Asmonga and Bobby Henderson available.

The Charley Hyatt All-Stars, led by the greatest of all collegiate basketball forwards, will make their first appearance in the Greater Pittsburgh district tonight when they oppose Coach Yans Wallace's Goldensons of the Allegheny County League at the South Side Market House. The Hyatt All-Stars opened their barnstorming tour in Jeannette last Monday night, defeating the Jeannette Felders by a 14-point margin before a capacity crowd. Interest in Hyatt's first appearance on the South Side has been high and preparations have been made to handle a large turnout.

Charley Hyatt

STARS IN LINEUP

Hyatt's All-Stars include in their lineup besides the noted Pitt star, such well-known passers as Pecker Minnick, of the Duquesne Lafayettes; Jerry (Gyp) Wunderlich, former Pitt center and now with the Lafayettes; Ben Lubic, of Duquesne University; Harvey White, former Carnegie Tech captain and star of the Pintex team in the County League; George Ramsay, one-time star center of the Pittsburgh Morrys, and Ray Montgomery, all-America Pitt lineman.

Another game has been added to the Hyatt schedule with the booking of Cleveland Union Trust for a contest in the Forest City next Sunday evening. The contest will be staged as preliminary to the world series battle between the Cleveland Rosenblums and the Rochester Centrals. The Cleveland Trust team is one of the strongest clubs in its class. J. J. Freund, Jr., now is the booking agent for Hyatt's team.

VERONAS TAKE TITLE

The second half crown in the County League was annexed by the J. J. Veronas last night when they defeated the Allentown quint, 31 to 26, at Columbus Temple. The Veronas meet the Duquesne Lafayettes, winners of the first half, in the final championship series.

The Goldenson Vanities copped their twenty-sixth win by bumping the North Side Community Girls, 45 to 11. The County League lineup:

Veronas—31.		Allentown—26.
Serbin	F	Kuntz
Hoffmann	F	Beraman
Twymann	C	Courtney
Miller	G	Allebach
Demaria	G	Bond

Substitutions—O'Hara for Hoffmann, Delvechio for Miller. Field goals—Serbin 5, Hoffmann, Twyman, Miller 3, Demaria, Smith 3, Berkman 2, Allebach 2, Bond 2. Fouls—Veronas, 9 out of 13; Allentown, 8 out of 12. Referee—Leo Carroll.

Nick Altrock Says:

BILOXI, Miss., March 19.—I see Chuck Klein, who busted the National League record last season with 42 home runs, signed up with the Phillies yesterday. There wasn't any flashlight powder or movie cameras or special correspondents around when he jotted his name on the spotted line. Nobody even knew he was holding out. Chuck is just in the wrong league, I guess. I don't know what his salary will be, but if Nick Altrock Klein pried $8,000 out of President Baker, that's bigger news than Babe Ruth's $80,000. The Phillies' dugout is the bargain basement of baseball. Why, that club wouldn't pay Rudy Vallee six bucks a season to croon the batteries through his megaphone. They would rather have Harry Lauder in center field than Hack Wilson.

RECORDS FALL IN NATIONAL A. A. U. MEET

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Dr. Paul Martin, the Swiss Olympic ace, and Ray Conker, of the Illinois A. C., can beat each other at their favorite distances, but meet trouble when they try to invade the other's domain.

Martin, defeated in a mile race a week ago, came back last night in the National A. A. U. indoor championships last night to conquer Conger at 1,000 yards. Martin had to set a new meet record of 2:12 6-10 to do it. But he left the Illinois flyer three yards behind in a great finish.

Herman Brix, big Los Angeles A. C. shot putter, set a new world record with the 16-pound iron ball, 51 feet 2½ inches. The old record, held by Herbert Schwarze, of the Illinois A. C., who took second place last night and also bettered the record, was 50 feet three inches. Schwarze beat that by an inch and one-half. The accepted world indoor record of 8 6-10 seconds for the 70-yard high hurdles, which has been beaten earlier in the season, was equalled twice last night. Monty Wells, of the Boston A. A. tied it in winning his heat, then Lee Sentman, Illinois star, repeated the time in winning the final.

ROYALS DROP PAIR

YOUNGWOOD, Pa., March 19.—The Trinity Cathedral Royals, of Pittsburgh, lost a pair of games to local teams here last night. The Royals were beaten out in the last three minutes of play by the Phalanx Fraternity Five, 19 to 17, and the Royals Reserves were walloped, 30 to 18, by the Radiola Juniors.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. Then you destroy it entirely.

To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Maybe You're Paying too Much For Gas . . . .

because You're Paying too Little

UNLESS you're using AMOCO-GAS, you're paying too much for gas. For although AMOCO-GAS costs more per gallon, it actually costs less per mile.

You'll find, first, that AMOCO-GAS gives extra miles to each gallon—enough of them to make up for the extra initial cost. And you'll find over a period of time that AMOCO-GAS substantially reduces operating costs, cuts down on your repair bills, keeps your car on the road and out of the shop.

Hundreds of big users operating thousands of trucks have proved the economy of AMOCO-GAS by actual and accurate tests. Motorists in ten states have proved it. Let your own car prove it to you.

We'll let you find out for yourself that AMOCO-GAS gives motor performance far superior to anything you've ever known, puts life in old cars, makes new cars behave as though they belonged in a much higher price class.

Unless you're using AMOCO-GAS, you're paying too much and not getting the performance of which your car is capable. Start at any AMOCO-GAS pump today—get the best possible motor performance at the least cost per mile.

Chickie's Plan to Marry And Work Rejected

CHAPTER XXXVII.

CHICKIE sat on her golden cloud, listening to the music of spring—the music of love, so sweet, it filled her heart with tears. It sang in every pulse. Her thought sank quietly, drowned in this warm emotion. She dwelt now in the free spaces where "if" and "shall not" do not come, for here the high dream has its will.

"Barry—if we could only stay here as we are now—always."

"And have manna drop from heaven, right here — between our teeth."

His head rested against her arm, her fingers smoothing lightly his eyebrows.

"But if we could, would you like it?"

"It's my own idea of a world as a first-class magician would have made it. Never read you the great epic of life did I? Well, it's good. I wrote it when I was a junior at college and I called it 'The Genesis of Morality.' Some name."

"Explain to your stupid loveress. I take it, however, you differ with the accepted theory. You don't believe it was the biting of the apple that brought good and evil to poor Eve and all her lovely children?"

"In my world there is neither good or evil. Only beauty. Whatever is beautiful is right."

"I'd like to live there."

"You'll have to wait a hundred centuries until we outgrow this habit of grafting consequences to our deeds, and then yanking up the deed that was in itself right and declaring it wrong. Oh, I could make you a world fit for men to live in!"

"And us poor wimmin? How should we fare?"

"On love!"

"A man's world again! I suppose we should be the sweet flowers for ye to pluck?"

"Ah—sweet to wither so. Not true, frail?"

"Yes! Most sweet if we'd wither all in a moment and vanish. But it's horrible to fade slowly with petals falling one by one and young fresh buds coming into bloom on the very same stalk even as we die. Huh? What say to that?"

Wants Barry

"Say it not. Never think of things like that in moments such as this!" He drew her head down, holding the delicate face and laughing into her eyes until she kissed him.

He was buoyant now—lighthearted as the night she had first met him at the beach, and as that first week when he came so gayly through the alley waiting to meet her. It made her heart a song to find him so.

He had no strained reluctance. As glad as she was . . . given up joyously to the happy hour. They loved each other. This alone mattered.

It raised Chickie above the world into this realm of stupendous music. From far off, like the pipings of grasshoppers, she heard occasionally Mary's quiet voice pleading, "Chickie, think—oh, don't take the harder things . . . ." More distant yet she heard Janina's warning, "A little love in a beautiful garden—watch it flourish; much love on the rock of poverty—it dies." The sweeping chords ran their melody over the faint echoes. She wanted it so!

She said absently: "Years aren't so long, Barry."

"No."

Looking down at the young vitality of his face with its clean hair line; the strong sweet mouth, she said impetuously: "Indeed, Mr. Red, I think I'd rather wait seven lean years for you than marry 10 kings tomorrow."

"Say that again in different words, sweet one. Pour it first into this ear and now in the other."

"How about you, Barry? Me or 10 queens—which?"

A Love Seal

"Don't tempt me, girl! Ten queens if they were all like you!"

"Would you have enough love for 10 times me? I'm a great glutton, if you must know."

"Ten times 10 and then some to spare."

"No!" She covered his face with her hands. "Don't look so. Here, you kiss my finger right there." She gave him her left hand, pressing the fourth finger against his lips and laughing. "Do you know what you've done, sir?"

She held out the hand: "Isn't it beautiful? So stunning that only I can see."

He watched amused: "What is it?"

"A seal on my finger. See it? Never mind. I do."

She leaned back against the tree and sighed because a bird winged upward with such beauty to the sky; because the branches of the eucalyptus on this hill of theirs swayed in such wistful rhythm. She said absently: "Barry, do you like bungalows?"

"Why for the architecture?"

"Answer anyway!"

"Yes—next to palaces."

"I like them better if they have a garden with a white Lady Banksia climbing over an arched gateway. Wouldn't that be like a welcome to people coming to visit? Not flats like Mary's or apartments?"

"Why not an airship, fair dreamer? That will take us more swiftly."

"Are you so impatient, Barry?"

"Yes. I never could understand this waiting on the pleasure or the luck of the future when we have the present in our hands. It's reckless, I suppose, but I think this existing order is only adapted for the comfort and happiness of the old and the half dead. It's not made for us. Who was that Frenchman—Anatole France?—who said we should be born old and grow young. He had the goods."

He talked rapidly, his hand reaching up and pulling her hair free until it stood out like a golden nimbus and the soft ends of it fell on his face. He laughed.

A New Idea

"I love your hair, Chickie, and your pretty eyes."

"And my fair hands and my crooked teeth?"

"I love you now—this moment." He drew the hair, winding it about his fists, forcing her down, his breath quickening.

She laughed and though it hurt and a few of the fine strands wrapped about his fingers she tossed her head back. "Let go — thee redhead loon! Hold off, unhand me!"

A dark flush swept over his cheeks, passed, leaving his face blanched. He stared at his hands and begun slowly and with shaking fingers to uncurl the fine gold hairs. Presently he glanced at her — humble, fearful that he might see anger in her eyes. She said nervously and with a little high laugh:

"Shall I have my hair bobbed, sir? Then it won't get in your way."

"Make a good job of it if that's your aim, Chickie! Bob yourself out of existence."

"Would you want that, Barry?" She put her hand under his. "No, and I won't, either." She added shyly: "Just now I have a new idea."

"What?"

But she hesitated, warned by instinct to silence. "You may not like it. Will you promise not to frown at me or say anything harsh? But first tell me this—you believe in everything new and modern, don't you?"

"Not by a long sight! Ever occur to you that you're somewhat a relic of the past? A dream of the fair women who walked the earth last century?"

"No—in my heart I'm very new! I believe in equality. I believe a girl should have a career. That's what I wanted to say, Barry. If you believed that, how much easier it would be!"

Business Career

"What's your secret genius, please? You've been hiding something from me. What career will you have?"

"Why—business, of course. Just where I am. You see—I could keep right on working and then—"

He sat bolt upright, lips parted, and stared at her. "Oh." Pause that shouted between them—clamored with hurt indignation. "Oh—you mean that you'd take turns at supporting us?"

Her cheeks flamed. "Not that at all. But you see—with $125 a month coming in sure—"

"You'd love that, wouldn't you? Just your ideal of things, isn't it? Bungalow with Lady Banksias over the arch and the young bride tripping out to work every morning because her husband doesn't earn!"

His eyes stormed at her. The soft, fairy peace of the spring afternoon broke in pain.

"I only meant, Barry—why you see—why—then it wouldn't have to be so far away—"

He didn't answer. Her hand trembled along his arm. I'll take it back—then. I won't say it again."

"Don't think it, either, Chickie! Never think of it again! Why did you say all that?"

He pulled her to him, tucked her hair back. His heart thumped against her, heavy and leaden. Like an arousing slap she had brought him back—forced him face to face with the hard realities before them. He wished to forget them.

Chickie's fingers played along his palms. "Then wait it is, Mr. Red! Pish, we should worry with a tree like this and fields and birds"——

As he looked her eyes filled, moving him to the heart. She half hid her head against him.

He could feel it now—feel her soft hands on his. Suddenly she had raised her face trembling in its eager beauty. She had said, "Oh, Barry—I love you—all and all. And you? As much as that for me?"

He stopped now in his excited walking, sat down at his desk, all his senses leaping. Chickie's eyes were before him, warm and pretty. They glowed in his thought, brought vividly, like a hand touching him, the scenes of the day to his mind.

He saw her face, dashed with faint color, smiling above him as his head rested on her arm—saw the gold hair that he wanted so to touch—felt it now falling on his cheeks. The hot, impetuous youth in him kindled. Ah—so beautiful—he fancied her in the room, walking about delicately, going over his books, saying: "Now, what is this—and what is that? The dear Red is brilliant!"

He wished for her, fancied her coming through that arch of Lady Banksias to meet him. She would reach her hand to his neck—he would have swept his arms about Chickie then. They ached with longing. He loved her.

Now he went over the swift, glad months since that night last September when they had met—went back further to the weeks when he had stared at the bright window of hers waiting for her startled, pleased encounter with his eyes. How merry she was!

The image of her sitting at the window—a figure of poetry with seven stars in her hair, so he fancied—stirred his imagination. The reality of her, sweeter than the image, now sent its piercing appeal fiercely to his young, impatient heart.

She loved him, too. Ah—all in all—he smiled happily. Make her say that again.

His thoughts drifted vaguely, losing themselves again and again in these recurring waves of feeling that swept gently like soft liquid flame about him.

In the midst of this he felt her hair as he wound it in his fists, drawing her head down. His breath labored—a shaking, hot uneasiness caught him.

Years and years— He took a bit of paper and figured idly, saying to himself. "Five years from now—" He wiped the moistness from his forehead.

For the hundredth time that night he tried to face coldly the problem before him. It seemed to him then that he loved Chickie more than anything in life. He wanted her. He wouldn't wait five years. That much was settled.

He said to himself, railing hotly against some invisible foe: "We'll not wait! Five years! Must be insane!"

For a long time he sat motionless, plunged in gloom. He felt himself in a pit, its walls of muffled darkness. When he struck at them they gave way silently and immediately closed again.

Now it was his earnings—now his future success—now the face of his mother—now Chickie. Each with its separate plea that came filing into his mind.

Not wait? Well—just what should he do? Throw everything overboard? Give up the law after all these years of study? Get out into something more profitable?

In days of penury, when his earnings were almost nothing, he often considered it. He wished he had studied engineering, commerce, medicine. Other fellows not much older than he could get by. Then Tufts or Lenon would throw him a case, he would handle it cleverly, throwing his entire energy into its problems. Uplifted with success, he dreamed of himself as a young Demosthenes holding a court spellbound with his eloquence; imagined the judge complimenting him for his sagacious brilliance. This resilient optimism carried him through many a month of grinding, profitless toil.

Barry Dunne was entirely confident in his own mind of his ultimate success. He would wait and work for it. It was a passion with him.

Now, as he angrily considered tossing it aside, the warm attraction of his senses gave way to a restless agitation. He began to walk again. Give up the law? He was crazy. No use ranting like a fool. Wouldn't help them any. Must be some other way.

MANY girls so emphasize some good point they have that they completely overlook or accentuate their bad points.

You've seen girls so concentrated upon a dimple they can make in their cheek that they seem totally unconscious of the fact that by doing so they are corrugating the rest of their face into a lot of wrinkles.

And because they have discovered that by lifting their eyebrows just so they can assume the most enchanting come-hither glances, they are getting a forehead like a washboard.

Tennyson's brook is a still, silent pool compared to the girl who knows she has a nice speaking voice and never gives it a rest.

Just because you have perfect teeth don't forget to powder your neck!

Mary Continues Story of Leslie's Blackmail Threat

"THEN it was Jack Leslie who gave Noel that blow tonight."

"No, it wasn't Leslie who struck Noel that blow," Mary said surprisingly. "He wasn't anywhere around, but he was responsible for it, just the same."

With a mighty effort I put Hugh Grantland out of my mind and bent all of my attention to Mary's tale.

"I'm sorry, dear," I said, "but I'll have to ask you to go over that last part again. I'm terribly worried about something—no—" as her eyes widened in fear—"nothing that concerns any one of the family—just a very dear friend—and I wasn't giving you the attention I should. Just tell me again what Leslie said about injuring Noel, and go on from there."

Meticulously she repeated Leslie's threat that Noel was "going to get a visit to the hospital" every time that Mary did not bring him the thirty-five dollars a week he had demanded from her.

"But, surely, dearest," I expostulated when I had considered the astounding threat, "you must realize that he was only bluffing. He wouldn't dare enforce a bargain like that. There happen to be laws against blackmailers and thugs, you know."

"That's what I told him, Auntie Madge," she said wearily. "And he only laughed."

"'Who'll get the worst of it if I'm arrested for blackmail?' he said, 'you or me? I'd just as soon be in jail as out of it—I haven't any reputation to lose, and at least I'd be provided with food and a shelter—which is more than I'll have now if you don't come across. And who knows? I might emerge as the great American novelist—there's a chance for a lot of realism in jail you know.'

"I was shaking inside as to what he might mean by 'getting the worst of it'," Mary went on, "but I wasn't going to give him the satisfaction of knowing it. So I laughed, though how I managed it, I don't know, and I said as sneeringly as I knew how:

"'Well! you certainly will get the chance to absorb a lot of realistic atmosphere for your novel if you make one move against Noel. I don't care what you try to tell Noel about me, although I'd advise you to have a high-spiked iron fence between you and him when you tell it or else have your running shoes in good condition. But if you harm Noel, I'll have you put into jail so quickly you won't know how you got there.'"

Unconsciously Mary was dramatizing and living over the painful scene through which she just had passed. Her head was thrown back, her eyes were glittering, her face was aflame with color.

"It was a good bluff, Auntie Madge," she said apologetically, "although I meant it in earnest, but it didn't work any more than the one did about Uncle Dicky running him out of town. He just tightened his grip on my arm, and he said:

"'Very Well, have it your own way. In less than a week see what happens to your little Noel. Oh! I personally won't have a thing to do with it. I wouldn't soil my hands on the little rat. But I have some good friends who aren't quite so squeamish. Then arrest me—if—you—dare.'"

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Man's Color-Complex

"THERE is something in BLUE that brings out the best in a man," says Marion Davies, the blonde screen star.

Of course, Blue is the color of the heavens, and of the eyes of the angels, and of the sashes worn by the virtuous, persecuted heroines in all the mid-Victorian novels. Besides, it is the antithesis of PINK, which is, somehow, confused in a man's mind with all feminine weakness and wickedness.

There is something disarming and appealing about blue; something that invests a girl with that irresistible "come-and-protect-me" charm which awakens all a man's chivalry, and inspires him to defend her—even when there's nothing to defend her against.

* * *

A blonde in green may look smart, dashing, cool and alluring; but there is a sophistication and a daring about green, that makes the most guileless young thing look vampish to the suspicious masculine eye.

Lavender and violet are even more provocative. They are the symbol of spring in her most coquettish and intoxicating moods. They may not suggest a purple past; but they, somehow, hint at an orchid future or, at the least, at a few mauve moments. They are the incarnation of sophistication.

There is something about a girl in violet, especially in spring, that positively frightens a man! He sees himself helplessly falling before her allurement, and going down for the third time. Perhaps, even proposing marriage!

But BLUE lends her an aura of innocence and naivete, which stills all his alarms, and brings to life all his boyish illusions and noble protective instincts. He simply cannot think of a girl in delicate baby-blue as "dangerous!"

Let the same girl appear in a rose-pink frock or a pale-pink tea-gown, and immediately she ceases to be a beautiful inspiration and becomes a challenge.

Pink is to a man, what scarlet is to a bull. It makes him wild! The adventuress in the play always does her vamping or her murdering in a rose-colored boudoir or a pink satin drawing-room—never in a blue-and-white kitchen.

No lady in a novel ever went the primrose way without a background of rose-colored lights. Yellow is warming and inviting; but it has to be adulterated with rose and called "rose-beige" in order to be subtly sinful.

But BLUE is the stop-signal which halts a man, even at a distance of six inches from your lips. It has that "oh-spare-me-sir" appeal. If blue flags, instead of red flags, were used at dangerous railroad crossings there would be fewer motor accidents.

Oh, yes, if there is anything sweet or fine or chivalrous or sentimental in a man's nature, there is no doubt that baby-blue will bring it out! You'd be surprised to know how much men are affected by colors.

The White House Gang

manage, by an effort, to make a favorable impression upon boys; others—TR was A No. 1 among these—cannot possibly help succeeding. It is not too much to say, that had TR been stripped of all the glamor of a hero—made for exapple a simple clerk among many hundreds in any of the government departments in Washington—his relation to us, would have been just as important as it was. Similiarly, with Mrs. Roosevelt. Of her, the story is told, that one of her sons, with the casual clarity of truth, once remarked, "When mother was a little girl, she must have been a boy."

A Disagreement

The influence of his splendid parents, strong as it was, could not always control Q, when out of their sight, but TR and Mrs. Roosevelt both knew that the independence of Q and of other members of the Gang was as precious as their own, all boys being created free and equal. Q knew it, too, and showed it in this expression, doubtless picked out of a remark of TR's—"We ALL pay taxes." Young as he was, it was his constant effort to keep fair in this respect; yet this very resolve brought about one of the Gang's early disagreements.

On a certain afternoon—from the outside looking in—members of the Gang might have been seen streaming across the garden behind the iron picket fence, like a pack of puppies in full cry, falling down, rolling over in the grass, kicking up their heels to the sun, getting up, disappearing with an idea, like a dog with a bone, behind shrubbery, reappearing, 10 minutes later.

After all this tremendous exertion, Q suggested abruptly, "How about bicycle racing in the hall?"

There was a deadwind silence for a moment; then someone said, with disgust and finality, "Oh, gee! I'm sick of that!"

"Well, whatever you say, we'll do," Q assented.

"Why should I say?" asked the other, irritated, because he had no immediate idea.

"Well, why not?" countered Q, flushing a rosy red.

"Because I don't want to. Isn't that enough?" the other boy snapped. "Just because this is your place, you needn't think—"

"Ah, shut up!" Q returned indignantly. "Let's do what you want to do. That's fair, isn't it?"

"No," the boy said, "it isn't. Because that's what you want to do now. . . ."

Fist Fight

Q remained silent; the logic of the statement seemed quite unanswerable. The Gang regarded the two disputants with heightened interest and extreme seriousness. What the argument was, originally, made no difference now; it had developed into a question of each boy standing up for what he considered his rights.

Q looked at his friend with blazing eyes, and then ran his hand uncertainly through his own tousled hair. The friend glared back, defiant, fanning his anger. The rest of the Gang, however, took action; they shoved the two disputants roughly together and each, instinctively, struck out at the other.

Two furious, snarling wildcats they were now, rolling in a struggling ball of arms and legs about the hard roof, panting, pulling, biffing, wrestling. Filled with delight, the rest of the Gang stood aside like gentlemen. It was a fine set-to, neither boy gaining anything, as far as we could see, except bruised knuckles, ripped collars, draggled clothes and streaked faces. It was a long, tough fight, ending, finally, in mutual exhaustion, both boys making weak, ineffectual passes or landing blows that no longer hurt. Eventually separating, they regarded each other with solemn, unblinking pleasure, and respecting each other vastly. Each had maintained his right and dignity; each had demonstrated he was no weakling. Quentin, like the other boy, had entirely forgotten the subject of dispute, which was, that, as host, Q had insisted that the other do whatever he wanted; they were firmer friends than before, and had knocked all prejudice and nonsense out of each other.

"My gollies!" Q said, "I bet," he went on, indicating the whole Gang with a sweep of his arm, "one of us could take on two of anybody else!"

Friendship Strengthened

We nodded in agreement. Through disagreement, we were really becoming knit together.

"How do you feel?" Q's late opponent asked him, as he rubbed the back of his own head, where it had smacked the roof.

"Refreshed!" Q replied, and immediately went on to quote:

"There was an Old Person of Ewell,
Who chiefly subsisted on gruel;
But to make it more nice,
He i-n-s-e-r-t-e-d some mice,
Which refreshed that Old Person of Ewell."

In the pause that followed, Q had another of his quaint ideas. "To make this thing stay this way," he said, "we must all kiss the 'buzzard-stone,' on the floor, in the front hall—"

So the Gang proceeded, by the shortest possible route, devising ceremonial as it went—which turned out to be that which is followed when the Blarney Stone is kissed. Quentin had heard all about it from "Gen. Information." The Gang held each of its members by his legs suspended, head downward, over the brass Seal of the United States. The blood ran to the boy's head and, sometimes, things fell out of his pockets, onto the marble floor. Each of us, finally, succeeded in kissing the eagle directly upon his brass beak—nowhere else would do—an initiation which was attended, without invitation, by several of the ushers, which detracted somewhat from the solemnity and pertinence of the occasion. . . . .

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Generous Impulse

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Last night I attended a bridge and shower for an acquaintance. The woman who had high score at bridge, and won the prize, presented that prize to the bride-to-be. Was that the proper thing for her to do? I think it was not. I believe the hostess should have had a guest prize for the guest of honor, but as she didn't, it looked to me as if the lady who won the prize was putting the hostess in a bad light. This lady had already given the bride-to-be a shower gift. Please send me your opinion on this.

B. B.

THE woman who won the prize should have kept it. There was no reason why she should have given the prize to the bride-to-be. I do not agree with you that the hostess should have had a guest prize—this is not at all necessary, and is done in only few communities. I am sure that the woman who gave the bride-to-be the prize that she herself had won did not at all mean to imply, by her gesture, that the hostess should have had a guest prize. It was probably just a generous impulse on her part.

Greeting the New Baby

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. When calling at a home where there is a death, and shaking hands with one of the family is it proper to say "we" or "I extend my, or our, sympathy?"

2—When one receives a card announcing a birth, should one send a gift to the baby, or is it bad form not to send a gift, or does a card of congratulation do as well? MRS. J. S.

EACH one, as she or he shake hands in friendship and sympathy, would say, "I do want to tell you of my deep sympathy."

2—It's good form to send a gift, if you are a close friend and if you wish to, but it isn't at all necessary. A note of congratulation is enough.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Health Value of Water

WATER is about the most important of all the substances found in the body. It is indispensible to health and life cannot be sustained without it.

We take too much as a matter of course the many blessings bestowed upon us. For instance, how little we realize the immense importance to us of the bountiful and pure water supplies brought to the doors of great communities for our benefit.

DR COPELAND

The great engineers have found the means to bring water miles and miles under the most efficient methods. The Roman water aqueducts of the ancients were not so wonderful as some of the immense modern aqueducts which bring water to some of our great cities.

These great water supplies are guarded on every hand. The region from which they come must be safeguarded from impurity of any sort. The springs and streams, the reservoirs and every inch of the territory over which the water comes are all under constant supervision. We derive the benefit.

The life processes of the body throw off poisons through the kidneys, bowels and skin. The kidneys are the chief agents of elimination.

The blood requires a continuous stream of water. It it does not get the right amount otherwise, it absorbs water from the intestine and other tissues. In this way it receives poisons also. The bowels are left dry and constipated.

The body throws off much water. Of this two-tenths is thrown off by the lungs in vapor, three-tenths as perspiration, and five-tenths in the urine and feces, the latter being waste material from the bowels. Because of Chemical changes in the body, additional watef is produced so that at times a person passes off more than he takes in.

An adult person requires at least a quart of water daily. Now, of course, some water is taken in through food and drink. Today very generally the custom is to take a lot of water in drinking tea and coffee. But do not forget that drinking pure, cold, not too cold, water, is one of the most beneficial habits one can have.

Water is the basis of all the fluids of the body, as well as being an element in all the solid tissues. Perspiration, urine, the blood, milk, and the gastric juices of digestion are composed almost entirely of water.

As I have said, much water is thrown off by the skin and the kidneys. The free drinking of water washes away the waste products and the solid matter of the body. It is quite probable that drinking much water prevents the formation of kidney stones.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

FEW women bother about the health of their muscles. Yet, defective, inelastic or sagging muscles are responsible for many anatomical imperfections. Thin, scrawney arms, for instance, spindle-shank legs, unwieldy bodies, carrying too large a cargo of fat. Good musculature not only produces normal lines and correct proportions, but brings grace, litheness and rythmic movement. Women, like men, should have exercise. Exercise that brings a glow. Even perspiration, which is necessary for the beauty and health of the complexion.

IN order to squirm into gowns with the abbreviated waistline, the plump sweeties are doing the torso twist; scatting fat cells from the feminine equator is the most popular pastime at the present moment. The proper position is to stand erect, toes pointing straight ahead, knees touching, hips back, abdomen flat. Bring the hands above the head, then down to the knees; with the finger ends define a wide circle, twisting the body from side to side. There should be a hard, muscular pull. Fat cells love ease and rest; where there is activity, they evaporate.

Optimists Get Upper Hand; Wall Street Helps.

—By B. C. FORBES—

OPTIMISM is licking pessimism. Wall Street captains the optimistic forces. It considers that conditions at the moment are only so-so; but Wall street always tries to anticipate, and anticipating, it is banking on better times coming.

This week's unofficial drop in day-to-day loans to 2½ per cent disturbs bears, heartens bulls. Our most influential bankers have not lately been liquidating stocks; the attacks come mainly from what Wall street calls "professional operators," meaning individuals of means who constantly speculate on a large scale, some of them active business men, some of them semi-retired business men, some of them out-and-out speculators, some of them brokers.

Yesterday saw Wall street in particularly cheerful mood. But no human being can foretell how Wall street will feel tomorrow. Even so, it can hardly be doubted that as the year advances so will good stocks. Utilities and oils have the most friends.

THIS is astonishing: The Chicago Stock Exchange has actually done more business thus far this year than it did a year ago, both in stocks and bonds.

The New York Stock Exchange has a different story to tell. Stock transactions since January 1 have totaled only 180,000,000 shares contrasted with more than 250,000,000 shares a year ago. Bond sales, at $575,000,0000, show a nominal increase over last year, but are far below 1928 and 1927. Stock sales, on the other hand, are nearly 20,000,000 shares ahead of 1928 and more than 65,000,000 shares ahead of 1927 and 1926.

Investment bankers are eagerly awaiting the development of a rip-snorting bond market. Distinct improvement in bond prices has followed the cheapness of money, but the public's appetite on new offerings is not yet insatiable, by any means. The American temperament being what it is, it is entirely possible that cheap money will do more for stocks than bonds. In the old days cheap money was reflected first by bonds, then by gilt-edged stocks, then by ordinarily good stocks and finally by all and sundry "cats-and-dogs" included.

A $3,000,000,000 bank is within sight — the largest in the world. The absorption of the Equitable Trust by the Chase National Bank will give it resources exceeding $2,800,000,000. The $3,000,000,000 mark doubtless will shortly be reached.

The one surprise is that this mammoth institution will not have a banker as its president, but a lawyer, Winthrop W. Aldrich, who only recently was made president of the Equitable, presumably because of the Rockefellers' heavy interest in that institution. Aldrich is John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s, brother-in-law. His father was Senator Aldrich of national monetary commission fame. This newest bank president, a Harvard graduate, is not 45.

Of course, Albert H. Wiggin, who becomes chairman of the institution's newly created governing board, will continue the real commander-in-chief of the Chase bank's forces, as he has been for more than 20 years. It was he, no one else, who conceived and engineered this colossal combination.

What financial New York now asks is, will the National City Bank be content to play second fiddle? Were I to hazard a reply, it would be "No."

THE rich, we are often told, are callous towards the poor. Yet who has been a main mover in trying to shame Harvard into giving 20 discharged scrub-women a more considerate financial deal? Corliss Lamont, son of Thomas W. Lamont, chief of the J. P. Morgan & Co. partners. Corliss is professor of philosophy at Columbia University. The money mart didn't appeal to him—and I rather think his father was glad it didn't, because he himself took readily to studies when a boy. Moreover, the eldest Lamont son, Thomas S., is following in the father's footsteps; he entered the house of Morgan after his war service and became a partner at the beginning of last year.

J. W. SPANGLER, head of the first Seattle Dexter Horton National Bank, Seattle, writes:

"I observe you refer to bank clearings as showing a marked contraction compared with a year ago. There is no barometer generally employed to measure trade activity that is so fallible as bank clearings. Always imperfect because they record only transactions between banks, but take no account of intra-bank transactions, bank clearings have become increasingly imperfect as a measure trade because of the extraordinary number of bank mergers, which would operate to reduce clearings in the cities reporting even though there were no diminution of business.

"Statistical data based upon clearings should be wholly abandoned and total debits substituted therefor. The American Bankers Association is, I think, considering a movement in this desirable direction."

Mr. Spangler's statements are thoroughly sound.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—The appetite for bonds, whetted by the cheapest money in years, brought steadily rising prices in today's market. The volume, especially in unlisted securities, was enormous, dealers reported, while the turnover on the New York Stock Exchange was at the rate of more than $5,000,000 an hour in the earlier dealings.

NEW YORK, March 19 (AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows: (000 omitted in sales column) (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Rush Higher

Lone Star Gas Steady

STOCKS SWEEP UP AS MONEY RATE FALLS

Call Loans Lowest in Five Years—Scores of Issues Rise 1 to 5, Some 16 Points

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Bullish forces continued to press their advantage in today's stock market as money rates dropped to the lowest levels in more than five years. Scores of active issues were marked up 1 to 5 points, with a few high-priced specialties whirled up 6 to 16, and with at least twoscore stocks elevated to new high levels for the year. Weakness of the tobacco and merchandising issues, coupled with heavy profit-taking, brought about moderate recessions from the morning's high levels in the early afternoon.

Total sales in the first two hours ran close to 2,000,000 shares, or nearly 100,000 above those during the same period yesterday, but there were fewer large blocks today. The ticker ran half an hour or more behind the market.

CALL MONEY AT 2

Call money renewed at 3 per cent, the lowest initial rate since February, 1925, and then dropped to 2 per cent. Outside money was again available in plentiful supply at 1½ per cent.

Business news continued spotty. One of the most encouraging developments of the day was the weekly Iron Age report that "the downward trend of steel specifications has been to a large extent arrested, but, with buying at close range, mills lack their customary backing of orders as the second quarter approaches."

F. W. Dodge reported an increase of 44 per cent in building contracts above the week before, but the 1930 total to date is running about 18 per cent below the corresponding period last year. National Bellas Hess, one of the largest mail order organizations, omitted the quarterly dividend due at this time.

BANKS MERGED

Considerable progress is being made in merger developments. Consolidation of the Chase National, Equitable Trust and Interstate Trust into the world's largest banking institution was effected yesterday. International Telephone announced the acquisition of a Turkish company. American Hawaiian Steamship and Dollar Line officials are reported to be near an agreement. A merger of Stutz, Gardner and Moon Motors is reported to be under discussion.

Renewals of selling pressure against Simmons Company carried that issue down 4 points to 50¼, the lowest price in several years. The stock sold as high as 188 last autumn. National Bellas Hess, Montgomery Ward and R. H. Macy sold down a point or more.

American Tobacco issues broke about 6 points, Liggett & Myers, 2½, and Reynolds and Lorillard about a point each. U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Patino Mines sank to new low levels for the year.

NEW HIGHS REACHED

Peoples Gas was the outstanding individual feature, soaring 16¼ points to a new 1930 high at 304. COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, March 19.—Cotton opened steady at an advance of 3 to 11 points today on overnight buying orders. Interest again seemed to center in the old crop positions, with May contracts selling up to 15.64, or 9 points net higher, while the new October advanced to 15.31c, or 6 points above yesterday's closing quotations. Hedge sales, continental connections were credited with buying, but the Liverpool market made a relatively easy showing and the advance here met a good deal of realizing and probably some selling for a reaction.

This was sufficient to supply the early demand and send prices off several points, with May reacting to 15.50c before the end of the first half hour, when the more active months were 4 to 6 points net lower.

Liverpool cables reported that continental buying had been supplied by realizing and American straddle selling in that market.

Reserve Bank Member Borrowings Contract $33,000,000.

A CONTRACTION of $33,000,000 in member bank borrowings from the reserve bringing the total of their indebtedness down to $95,000,000 is among the most important disclosures in this week's consolidated bank statement. Loans on securities rose $146,000,000 during the week, and commercial borrowings increased by $10,000,000 while investments in government and other securities were cut by $26,000,000. The further contraction in member bank borrowings fits in with the statement of the assistant federal reserve agent at New York before the Credit Men's Association holding that the banks are in a better condition to lend money now than last summer because of the sharp drop in borrowings from the reserve system.

Another cut of ½ or 1 per cent in bankers' acceptance rates, placing one to four months bills on a 3½-3 per cent basis, the lowest in about five years, tended to further emphasize the relaxation that has come about in money rates. Further shading of time money rates for shorter dates also was reported, while in the demand money market funds literally "went begging," the rate dropping to 2 per cent in the outside market midway through yesterday afternoon. On the stock exchange the renewal rate of 3½ per cent was followed by a quick letdown in the charge for fresh accommodation to 3 per cent. Money brokers are confident that a long period of easy money is assured, but nevertheless they are careful to call attention to the fact that the fiscal operations of the Treasury Department, particularly its short-term overdraft on the Federal Reserve are a potent factor in the present pronounced ease in the demand market.

STEEL common was in the van of the market on the forenoon rise in the general run of seasoned and specialty favorites yesterday. The old-line leader was buoyant at times with its strength giving rise to rumors of a possible extra dividend in consequence of the substantial tax refund recently allowed the corporation, which left a balance of some $16,000,000 after provision for a credit against taxes due from the corporation in its 1929 profits. The advance in Steel, however, was checked in the early afternoon by selling, which came in on the news that its mill operations had slipped down to 80 per cent against 82 per cent a week ago and 97 per cent this time last year. The average for the industry is now estimated at 74 per cent against 76 per cent last week and 94½ per cent a year ago.

With the turn into the afternoon yesterday, the best type of investment railway shares came into greater prominence under the leadership of Atchison, New York Central and Pennsylvania. Advances ranging from 1 to around 6 points were the rule in that quarter of the list, with the buying movement in the carrier stocks developing as usual when it became apparent that industrial and other shares, which had been favored earlier, were evidently encountering greater resistance. The yield offered in the average of high-grade rails is measurably better than that afforded by comparable industrials. Around yesterday's best levels Atchison, for example, was selling to yield about 4.2 per cent, New York Central about the same, and Pennsylvania about 4.7 per cent, as against a yield of slightly less than 3.8 per cent offered on steel at its best prices.

SINCE Secretary of Commerce Lamont became a member of the cabinet his weekly remarks are awaited with interest in the financial district. He has a splendid grasp on business conditions in general and a well founded background, since before going to Washington he was the head of the American Steel Foundries Company. His latest statement emphasized the co-operation of the various states in promoting greater business activity and also added that unemployment figures will, in his opinion, carry greater significance when the new census figures are compiled.

Now that practically all security markets have again turned upward bargain hunters are scanning the stock lists for issues they believe to be undervalued. Some have hit upon Nathan Strauss, Inc., in the outside market, which has been active and strong of late. Earnings in the six months ended December 31, last, amounted to $1.21 a share and sales in the first two months of this year showed a gain of over 23 per cent. Company operates a chain of 102 retail stores in and around the New York metropolitan district and, according to reports, further expansion is planned.

SINCLAIR 1929 NET NEAR RECORD

Report Will Show Profit Is Well Above Previous Year; Predict $2.75 on Common

NEW YORK, March 19.—When the annual report of Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation is issued toward the middle of the next month, it will disclose earnings for last year not only evidencing a good increase over those for 1928, but coming within striking distance of the 1926 results, which were a record for the corporation.

A good deal depends on the amount which Sinclair will charge out of earnings for reserves. But allowing for liberal deductions in accordance with the corporation's customary practice, net profit of about $15,300,000 available for the common stock, after the deduction of dividends on the 8 per cent preferred, is indicated. This would be equivalent to more than $2.75 a share on the 5,500,000 shares of no par common stock outstanding.

RECORD IN 1926

In 1926 the corporation reported surplus for the year amounting to $12,142,347 after preferred dividends, which was equivalent to $2.70 a share on 4,497,165 average number of common shares outstanding during the year. In 1927, a poor year for the industry, the the record year for the Sinclair amount available for the common stock was $4,032,449, but in 1926 organization, net after preferred dividends amounted to $16,239,290, equal to $3.60 a share on 4,509,480 shares of common.

Sinclair has always adhered to a policy of charging heavy reserves out of earnings for depletion, depreciation, etc. In 1928, for instance, it charged out almost 60 per cent of net income for this purpose, $19,418,552 being set aside out of net income of $32,865,899. In 1927 the deduction was even greater proportionately.

SECOND HALF SLOW

In its semi-annual report for the period ended June 30, 1929, Sinclair reported profit of $16,449,250 before federal taxes, and reserves.

After the turn of July the excessive production of crude oil and gasoline, combined with already heavy supplies on hand, began to have its effect in depressing the price of gasoline. However, the earnings of Sinclair continued to maintain a good increase over 1928, net before reserves in the first eight months last year being approximately $24,000,000 before taxes and reserves, or approximately 50 per cent better than in the similar period of 1928.

OPERATIONS CURTAILED

As a matter of business policy the corporation reduced its refinery operations last year so as to avoid the accumulation of excess supplies of gasoline. It is now producing sufficient to meet current requirements. Sinclair also restricted its drilling operations and crude oil production in accordance with curtailment programs in various fields.

Due to increased runs of crude, Sinclair Pipe Line Company, in which Sinclair owns equal interest with Standard Oil Company of Indiana, had net earnings of $9,420,757 in 1929 after federal taxes, compared with $8,388,285 in 1928. It is likely that Sinclair will dispose of its 50 per cent interest in Sinclair Pipe Line Company and Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company to Standard Oil Company of Indiana if negotiations for merger with Prairie Oil and Gas Company and including Prairie Pipe Line Company are successful.

Spang, Chalfant Earns $4.57 a Share

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE annual report of Spang, Chalfant and Company, Inc., which will be published within a few days, will show net profit of $4,243,243 after taxes, depreciation, interest and all other charges. This was equivalent to $4.57 a share on the common stock after deducting preferred dividends.

Profits represented a gain of over $1,000,000 over 1928 when $3,226,188 or $3.34 a share was earned. Results for 1929 were slightly in excess of the estimate of earnings made in this column several months ago.

After paying dividends on $13,750,000 of 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock the company added $3,428,671 to surplus.

Earned 98 Cents In Quarter

RESULTS for the final quarter of the year were good considering the state of general business. Profit for the three months of $941,567 or 98 cents a share was only slightly less than in the corresponding period of 1928. When earnings amounted to $985,247 or $1.06 a share.

Profit for the quarter alone was sufficient to meet dividend requirements of $814,572 on the preferred stock for an entire year with a good margin to spare.

Operations were at a high rate during all of 1929 with the exception of the final weeks. Profit of $3,301,676 in the first nine months of the year was greater than earnings for the full year of 1928.

Funded Debt Reduced

THE company has been gradually reducing its funded debt. The annual report will show $8,829,000 of the first 5s outstanding. This represents a reduction of $501,000 during the year. Following the merger with the Standard Seamless Tube Company in February, 1928, $10,000,000 in bonds were issued. Since that time $1,171,000 of these have been retired.

The report will also show an improved cash position and an increased property account as a result of improvements made to plants during the year. Cash was increased in spite of an expansion in inventories made necessary to supply trade from the Memphis warehouse.

Closes Second Year

THE report covers the second year of the company's operation since the consolidation. It reflects the benefits derived from the merger.

The company makes lap weld and butt weld steel pipe and seamless tubing. The seamless capacity was secured through the merger which rounded out the organization's activities. The present capacity is 350,000 tons of seamless tubing and 300,000 tons of welded pipe annually.

Extensive plant improvements made since the consolidation and additional work now in progress are important factors in strengthening the company's position in the steel pipe business. Improvements are now being made at the Etna plant at a cost of $500,000. These include a rearrangement of equipment to reduce handling of materials, the installation of more efficient methods of welding and changes in the power system. Some of the improvements are expected to pay for themselves in 18 months.

STEEL BUYERS TALK PRICE

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 19.—The most encouraging market development affecting the iron and steel industry in recent weeks is increasing interest shown in second-quarter requirements by some of the principal consuming lines. This is more noticeable in sheets and strips than in other products. Buyers of sheets are asking for price protection throughout the next quarter, but it is understood that sellers are unwilling to guarantee such protection beyond April. Some contracts have been extended through April on the basis of the present market. Producers are endeavoring to win an advance of $2 per ton for the next quarterly period.

Encouraging reports are reaching the district regarding Ford Motor needs over the next three months. Steel makers do not consider it likely that Ford will reach a daily production of 9,000 cars by May 1, as indicated in some quarters, but they do look for a substantial improvement as spring weather stimulates retail sales.

Reflecting smaller buying volume in steel scrap as a weaker market, off 25 cents per ton from previous levels, with a range of $16.50 to $16.75, and dealers able to pick up material as low as $16.

Selecting An Executor

A JUSTICE of the United States Supreme Court, who died a short time ago, familiar through the experience of many years as a Judge with the tribulations and losses of Estate Management by individuals, left the handling of his affairs entirely to a Trust Company.

He was confident that the financial future of his family would best be safeguarded by a Trust Company, because of its responsibility, the intimate knowledge of financial transactions of its officers and their close attention to duty.

MERGERS SEEN AS BUSINESS PANACEA

Lumber Industry Seeks Prosperity Through Broad Scale Consolidations

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—With the panic of last autumn fading into history, there is an increased tendency on the part of business executives to turn to the merger formula as a panacea for restoring business stability.

Inasmuch as the administration has taken leadership in fostering the idea of economic balance, practical minded men of business are looking to Washington for a modernization of the anti-trust attitude. As a matter of fact, Attorney General Mitchell's expressions of opinion have done the very reverse of giving this reassurance, and his activities against movie combines injected a spirit of hesitation into the career of trust forming.

I learned here that one of the oldest industries — the lumber trade—is seeking the open sesame to prosperity through the merger route. Dr. Wilson Compton, manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, with headquarters here, advocates a broad program of large scale mergers within his industry.

LUMBER MERGER

Queried concerning the reports of plans for the formation of a merger of the chief lumber companies of the Pacific Northwest, Dr. Compton said:

"It is true that negotiations have been proceeding for some time," he told me, "for a merger of a number of the larger lumber manufacturing concerns on the Pacific Coast. It is within the range of possibility that a company will be created that might create as high as five billion feet of lumber annually, which is about one-seventh of the annual output of lumber in this country. Directly and indirectly such an enterprise would probably represent an investment of around $500,000,000.

"The interests of the companies that are considering the advantages of consolidation and those of the public are common. Owing to the fierce competition that exists between the great lumber companies and other industries making products for similar uses, there is an urge to overproduce and undersell, with the result that the industry as a whole is not able to develop scientific research, for which there is great opportunity to work out both perpendicular and horizontal mergers of alleged industries and undertake commercial forestry on a large scale. An industry that is dragged down by its own cannibalism is not likely to have much time to study its projection 20 or 50 years hence, or even to examine those current changes of policy and manufacturing methods that might mean great progress in industry and vast advances in conservation and wood utilization.

CONSERVATION NEEDED

Dr. Comptom believes that the future of the industry lies in wood conversion—the chemistry of timber—rather than in mere traditional sawing of lumber.

The question of trust forming on a still larger scale becomes increasingly an outstanding phase of the relationship between government and business.

Will the new regimen of cheap money start a new building boom? High money rates checked the last boom, but the fulfillment of housing needs was also an important factor. Although money conditions have radically changed, the relationship between the supply and demand for buildings will probably prove a determining factor.

Giving an insider's view, Graham R. Holly, superintendent of the bond and mortgage department of the Home Life Insurance Company, an important money lender, told me: "Building construction in the final analysis must be governed by the law of supply and demand. A survey of the conditions throughout the country seems to indicate that there is no shortage and that no 'building boom' is necessary or desirable.

"As far as the life insurance companies are concerned, I believe construction loans will be scrutinized very carefully. I do not believe a speculative builder should be encouraged, but where there is a definite demand by a home owner the life insurance funds will be available as they always have been.

VACANCIES GUIDE

"Undoubtedly you are in touch with the statistics as to construction. You know the percentage of the vacancies and comparison can be made covering periods of time and in the different localities. Of course, certain sections and certain cities show a higher percentage of vacancies than others.

"The conditions at present existing would seem to indicate that it is the part of conservatism and sound judgment to weigh each proposition very carefully on its merits and not to contribute in any way to an oversupply in building construction."

DAILY TRUE STORY

Outranked!

CISSIE BURGESS loitered by the well-sweep and pretended to be watching Cleo's latest litter of pups sprawling in the sun by the sagging front stoop of her home.

In reality Cissie was keeping a sharp eye down the road where the chinkapin bushes hid the curve.

She was wondering whether Bud Kitson or Clay Jackson would appear first.

She was wondering whether it mattered.

She was wondering if every girl found it as difficult to decide between two suitors.

There was no question but what both the boys were suitors, after the age-old custom of young folks in the Greyson district of the Virginia Blue Ridge Mountains.

They came often, sometimes together sometimes alone, and they said the usual "Howdy" to her folks and sat and smoked and talked with her Pa and after a while her folks would go inside and leave her there with either one, or both.

This time it was Clay Jackson who appeared first.

Cissie busied herself drawing a bucket of water. She took it in. Her father sat on the stoop smoking his corncob, but as it was a woman's work to tote water, he paid no attention to her.

She heard her father say, "Howdy, Clay," and heard Clay's "Howdy, Mister Burgess."

"Set," said her father.

Her mother peered out, spoke to the young man and said, "That's Clay."

"I seen him," Cissie admitted.

"Your Pa thinks right tolerable of Clay," her mother went on.

"So do I," Cissie acknowledged.

"I reckon you'll be merryin' up with him."

'Possum Feast

"Like as not."

Her mother looked at her queerly.

"If you ain't sure you want to, then wait till you are," she advised.

"That's what I aim to do," and Cissie went out and spoke to Clay.

After a while Clay and Cissie were alone on the front stoop.

Clay observed that it would soon be cold enough to "ketch" 'possums.

Cissie allowed that if he brought her a nice fat one she would bake it for him with some yams and bid him come and eat.

"We could get married up together right soon, Cissie," said Clay.

"We could if we was set to."

"I can git the Luther place—it's in good shape 'cept for some roof patchin'—old Mis' Luther in Roanoke has give me lief to use it and pay what I can."

"Hit's a nice place," Cissie agreed.

"Your paw's willin'?"

"I'm wonderin', Clay—reckon I'd best wait until Spring."

"Then, it's your word?"

"Not exactly, Clay. I reckon I want to wait until Spring finds out. I ain't givin' my word to nobody until Spring."

"You'll give me your word come spring, Cissie, I reckon."

"Like as not, Clay."

"Then I'm goin' to Roanoke. Old Mis' Luther's gal's man can git me a job. Reckon I'll have a right smart of cash come spring for fixin' up our housekeepin'."

"Roanoke is fur off, Clay—but your pa don't need you now, now your brother Stonewall's growed so big."

"I'll go in an' say 'Howdy' before I go."

"Do so," urged Cissie.

She watched Clay go down the road. He was tall and rather heavy for his 20 years, but he was steady. He didn't carouse. Only at dances and weddings when the corn liquor was set out for everyone, did he touch it and then not too much. Clay would make a good, steady man for her.

Cissie was going inside the house when she saw Bud Kitson. He stopped to talk with Clay. Bud and Clay had been friends since they were youngsters. Kit came on toward the house.

Kit was even taller than Clay, but not so heavy. He stood straighter and was more nimble. Perhaps Clay could throw him in a wrestling match, but Bud could work faster. But didn't seem to take life quite so seriously as Clay, but he was handsomer—or, as Cissie put it in her thoughts, "right smart comely fur a man."

Waits Cissie's Word

Bud greeted Cissie, looked in at the open door, spoke to her father and mother and went back and sat beside Cissie.

"Goin' to be good ructions over to Crockett's next Saturday when Bill Basset marries the widder Williams," Bud said.

"Like as not," Cissie agreed.

"Did—did Clay ask you?"

"Don't know as Clay knew about hit," Cissie replied.

"Then will you go along with me, Cissie?"

She said that she would.

But Kitson had decided that it was quite time he got Cissie's "word" to marry him. It was his intention to speak about it this day, but he thought that perhaps it would be best to wait until the night of the wedding at Crockett's. Cissie, going with him and all, would feel more in the mood.

At the wedding and "ruckuss," as the inevitable dance was called, Cissie had a good time. She danced quadrilles and reels with both Clay and Bud, except that she followed the time-honored custom of having the first and last with her escort.

It was a good three miles home, but unless they were going as far as the "city," which was Wytheville, they always walked.

There was a fall chill in the air.

"Cissie," said Bud, "it's comin' on winter. You and me ought to get married up with each other."

"We might, Bud. I don't reckon I'm sure."

"Pa has give me grandpa's place. It's a sight better'n our place 'cept for needin' a new chimbly and a good stove. I aim to git help and build the chimbly over and I got money enough for a nice stove and things."

"It's right pretty on the hill there, Bud—needs some clearin' of bresh."

"I can do that. Then I got your word we'll get married right soon, Cissie?"

"No, Bud, I aim to wait until spring."

"Well, that ain't so much to wait. I got your word on it for spring?"

"I ain't givin' nobody my word until spring. I'll let your know then, Bud."

"You'll give me your word, sure enough, then."

"Like as not," Cissie said, and she wondered again why she couldn't decide.

Town Surprised

Clay Jackson's going away to Roanoke to work all winter created quite a lot of talk. It was only in recent years that the boys cared to go away and work.

To the surprise of everyone, Bud Kitson got away from Greyson first.

"I'll be back to fix up grandpa's place so's we can be merried come Spring," Bud told Cissie.

Then Clay Jackson left for Roanoke. Bud's going to New York had taken some of the glamour from his own trip.

Spring had arrived. The big ox-heart cherry trees were all abloom before Clay Jackson got back.

He went to see Cissie Burgess, explain that he had saved a right smart of money and asked her for her word to get "merried up" with him.

'Soon, before long, I'll let you know," was the best he could get from Cissie at this time.

"You as good as give your word," Clay reproached her.

"I reckon I didn't give no word," she insisted.

"But you will give me your word right soon?"

"Like as not, Clay."

Cissie wanted to wait and see Bud Kitson. Not because he had been to New York, sent her picture cards and got work there, but because she wanted to make sure.

On Sunday Cissie stared down the road in amazement.

"Pa, looks like a soldier a-comin'," Cissie called.

But it wasn't a soldier, it was Clay Jackson.

He wore a uniform of khaki, with gilt buttons, red stripes on the trousers, red epaulets and the word "Rodisco" in gilt on the red collar of his tunic.

Cissie stared her eyes out at him.

"Why Clay, you're right down amazin'," Cissie cried. "Was you to a war whilst you was away?"

"No," admitted honest Clay. "This is the uniform I worked in. I wore it every day all winter in Roanoke."

"But what is a—a——" she peered at the gilt letters on the collar, "a 'Rodisco?' "

Clay's Uniform

"That means Roanoke Distributing Company. I distributed things, anything, handbills, samples, all sorts of things. This company had a dozen of us and kept us mostly busy, going clear to Salem and 'round."

"You look awful nice," Cissie admitted.

Clay believed this the time to again ask Cissie for her "word." Cissie felt that she ought to give it—that she wanted Clay—he was certainly handsome in that uniform. She would make him wear it when they stood up before the parson. But Cissie still wanted to be sure. She wanted to see Bud Kitson again.

She got her wish after the manner of a fairy tale, for Bud appeared right then. He wore a dark blue suit and looked rather cityfied. It didn't take him long to size up the situation.

"You sure got a good rig, Clay," Bud agreed. He turned to Cissie.

"I had a sort of a rig, Cissie," he said.

"Like that?" she asked.

"Sort of."

"Wear it over, let's look at it," Cissie invited.

Bud nodded.

"Tomorrow," he promised. He left soon. Cissie had made up her mind that nothing could be so attractive as what Clay was wearing.

But the next day Bud Kitson called.

Cissie was speechless.

Bud wore a smart black-visored red and gold hat with a white pompon. He wore a long red and gold cape lined with white. He wore creamy white trousers with wide gold stripes and a red coat plastered with gold braid.

"I reckon you must have been workin' at bein' a general in Noo Yawk," Cissie's father said.

"No, just a captain," Bud said, "a captain of ushers in a movin' picture place."

"Oh, Bud, let's git married up together next Satady and you wear that," cried Cissie.

It was a great "ruckuss."

Poor Clay Jackson was certainly outranked.

Lack of Inquiry Blamed For Low Grade Juries

In the opinion of a member of a prominent law firm, who writes to comment on a Sun-Telegraph editorial on the Forney acquittal, which called for some means of getting sensible persons on juries as a way of avoiding such farcical verdicts, the present law is adequate if rightly enforced,

"I would like to call your attention to the fact," he writes, "that the present Act of Assembly which provides for the summoning of jurors for Allegheny County, while not an ideal law, would probably be entirely satisfactory if it were properly administered. I believe investigation would show that there is no adequate investigation made to learn whether the jurors summoned for service are fit or not. Observation indicates that there are large numbers of jurors summoned who, if they had been properly investigated in accordance with the existing law, would have been left at home."

There is no doubt of the correctness of our correspondent's assumption in the matter. That is proven by the reprimands judges have passed on juries in recent months for acquittals, including the verdict in the Borkoski case as well as the Forney trial. If proper investigation of jurors is not made something should be done about it, since the need for intelligent jurors appears to be very great,

Ejection of Undesirable Aliens Will Stop Mischief

It is high time that the government of the United States stopped trifling with the abuse of American hospitality by undesirable aliens,

Surely a government that excludes an alien upon the suspicion that he may prove to be undesirable ought not to hesitate to expel an alien who has demonstrated that he is undesirable,

If, after rigid enforcement of existing law, it is found that more law is needed to rid this country of undesirable aliens, then the Congress should legislate without fear or favor to the end that these morally unfit may be deported as rapidly as the physically and mentally unfit are remanded whence they came,

Justice to American citizenship, justice to desirable aliens who are candidates for citizenship, justice to law abiding aliens who appreciate the privileges of residence in this country demands that there be no more trifling with the mischief making of all sorts and conditions of undesirable aliens whether they prey upon city or country life,

Let the federal government make an example by rounding up undesirable aliens from all parts of the country and deporting them with a zeal worthy of the cause,

The mischief making of undesirable aliens in our midst will then cease to be a problem,

Builders on Record For Erecting Town Hall

The Builders' Exchange is the latest organization to go on record in favor of building the Town Hall now. That is natural, some will say, implying that the builders would be directly interested. And what of it? The builders are but one of the organizations, but were they alone they would be justified in urging the County Commissioners to act on this important matter,

Builders have first hand knowledge of a very important industry and when they say, as they do, that awarding a contract for the Town Hall would do much to stimulate business and increase employment they speak with authority.

Although the annual "Clean-up, Paint-up, Plant-up" campaign does not begin for more than a month—April 27-May 10—arrangements already are being made to mobilize an army of 200,000 school children in the movement,

They will be taught how to plant trees and shrubbery properly so that when the time arrives they will be able to engage in one of the objectives, planting of trees where they are needed, especially in waste places,

When the kiddies learn, they should teach their parents—if they need teaching. They should especially teach them the idea, clean up, paint up, plant up,

Foreign Entanglements

A British View,

Earnest men and women who want to push us into the League of Nations are referred without comment to this statement by Viscount Grey, Britain's wartime Foreign Minister, in the current number of "Foreign Affairs:"

"The intrinsic strength and geographical position of the United States makes it independent of support of any other nation. This it is, I imagine, which makes the historic American warning against foreign entanglements as potent in America today as it was when it was first enunciated. And so, no doubt, it will remain, for EVERY NATION WOULD GLADLY AVOID FOREIGN ENTANGLEMENTS AS LONG AS IT FELT THAT IT COULD SAFELY DO SO."

THE MAN WE DIDN'T KNOW

By Herbert Kaufman

SEVENTEEN years after his disappearance on the Titanic, Mary Hubbard Heath, his sister, introduces "The Elbert Hubbard I Knew." And, in that frank and whimsical chronicle of typical mid-west family life, unsparingly reveals the humble circumstances from which his distinctive genius derived,

Horatio Alger might have invented the story of this small town lad, who lifted himself by his BOOT-STRAPS into the encyclopaedia and the literary forefront,

For 36 years, the last career for which Elbert Hubbard apparently qualified, was the field in which he so NOTABLY flourished,

He left school in his early 'teens, to chore among the neighboring farms. He seemed especially cast for just that type of work. He never read books or studied his lessons. Like Scott, Wellington and Oliver Goldsmith, no teacher discovered a scintilla of promise in the youngster. He showed no interest in history or mathematics. He simply couldn't learn to spell,

THAT was probably because he was too DOG-TIRED, from harvesting and husking, milking and wood-chopping, to follow the blurred and dancing type by lamp light,

Often he was so exhausted from premature labor and exposure that he fell asleep at the supper table. The hands that later held a gold enthroated pen were first calloused and cracked by the meanest of drudgery,

The chariot of fortune, on which he drove to his fated destination at East Aurora, was a soap wagon. From 16 to 36, he successively peddled, advertised and manufactured soap,

Then he suddently decided to write. He went to Harvard to find the tools for his new craft. He was almost 40 years old when he made that momentous decision, and it required a rare type of courage to submit his comparative illiteracy to the amused daily scrutiny of an undergraduate class,

IT took him barely two years to bridge the gaps in his education. He immediately founded the Philistine and began to jab its picturesque and incisive philosophy into the Pharisee, the Fathead and the Quitter,

He scribbled the "Message to Garcia," rushed it unrevised into print, and over-week became a world-quoted celebrity,

He had the goods, and recognition paid for them C. O. D. There is no set season for success. The public will always render his due to a DELIVERY MAN. And the secret of Hubbard's eminence lay in the fact that he had so much merchandise to deliver. He peculiarly understood the sort of things that average folk think about, the kinds of problems which concern average intelligence—from door-bell contacts, not attic observation,

He collected his amazing knowledge of human nature in a canvasser's sample case. He met the hard, cold facts of existence round country-store stoves, between plow shafts and at the saw-buck,

THE Harvard episode was the LEAST factor in his preparation. College merely taught him how to smelt his NATIVE ores. It furnished him with none of the metal which he beat into lines of beauty and patterns of wisdom on a long postponed anvil,

He had the gumption to "cut bait" and shift his fishing to DEEPER waters at a time of life when 99 per cent of us cravenly surrender aspiration to the adverse odds,

He refused to recognize the ridiculous dead-lines with which tradition usually browbeats rut-captives,

He never heard of the "inferiority complex" and would have jibed it into the joke column had that coward phrase ever attempted to intimidate his self-confidence,

He didn't turn to authorship until he and experience had something SUBSTANTIAL to say. That's why he died in the arms of fame, and as "The Elbert Hubbard Whom the Britannica Knew."

∴ LISTEN, WORLD ∴

By Elsie Robinson

BOOZE? Hop? Gambling? Vicious habits, all of them. Habits, all of them. Habits that creep in stealthily and demoralize human life. But there's another habit, even more insidious and dangerous, of which you never hear a warning word . . . Day Dreaming.

Day dreams have spoiled more lives than all the booze, hop and cards put together. Yet most of us think they're just a pleasant, harmless way of killing time.

Alcoholism, morphine addiction, gambling, doctors and psychologists say these are forms of "escape." Men drink, gamble and take drugs to get away from reality. A few cocktails, a sniff of powder, the lure of an unturned card, and the workaday world vanishes. Away go your fear and sadness, the thought of the work you should do, the problem you should face. Something has happened. You've crossed a threshold . . . stepped into a new world . . . a warm, happy, careless, lifty-drifty world where at last all your dreams can come true without any trouble to yourself.

Gone are worries and fear, pressures and responsibilities. Everyone admires you, envies you, courts you. And it's all so easy . . . a swallow of alcohol . . . a sniff of cocaine, a deal in cards and you're free!

Free in your poor, dazzled, doped mind—but not really free. Actually, the most miserable slave on earth!

That's what booze and hop and gambling can do to you. That's what day dreams can do to you, too.

Day dreams—castles in Spain—with never a penny to pay. Everything you want to have or be, yours, without a struggle. Just close your eyes and you're off. Gone are the dirty dishes and the crying baby. Gone are the clacking typewriters and the endless ledgers.

Gone the sense of failure, the nag of responsibility, all the dreary, weary world of reality. And you're off, in a warm, careless, lifty-drifty world of Make-Believe.

Day Dreams—the escape from reality. The dear, dopey haven for wounded conceit and lazy muscles—the hideaway for the lazy and cowardly and silly, who haven't the spunk to buck life as it is. Once in a while day dreaming's fun, but lookout when it becomes a habit! Many a woman has sacrificed a good husband and home for the unreal romance of day dreams. Many a man has passed up a fine career for the false lure of power in a day dream.

Beware of that secret threshhold over which we escape from reality!

Wise Words

The world is satisfied with words. Few appreciate the things beneath.—Pascal.

Nothing is more simple than greatness; indeed, to be simple is to be great.—Emerson.

Dissensions, like small streams,
are first begun,
Scarce seen they rise, but gather
as they run. —Garth.

There is as much eloquence in the tone of the voice, in the eyes and in the air of a speaker as in his choice of words.—La Rochefoucauld.

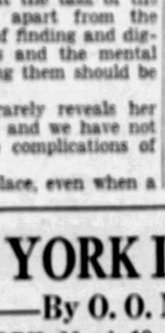
THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells,

THOUGH they are wrong, they are at least wrong on a grand scale, since the age of the earth is somewhere about half a million times greater than he supposed. Even today the average man tends to think the 6,000-year antiquity of Babylon or Egypt enormous,

But just as astronomy is teaching us to think of cosmic space on a wholly different scale from geography, to be measured in terms of "light-years" running into ten thousands of millions of miles, so geology is making it necessary to think of earth-history on a wholly different time-scale from human history, in terms of million-year periods, to which a decade bears almost the same proportion as an hour does to a century, and a century as a day does to a whole generation of human life.



H. G. Wells.

To think in such magnitudes is not so difficult as many people imagine. The use of different scales is simply a matter of practice.

We very soon get used to maps, though they are constructed on scales down to a hundred-millionth of natural size; we are used to switching over from thinking in terms of seconds and minutes to some other problem involving years and centuries; and to grasp geological time all that is needed is to stick tight to some magnitude which shall be the unit on the new and magnified scale—a million years is probably the most convenient—to grasp its meaning once and for all by an effort of imagination, and then to think of all passage of geological time in terms of this unit.

2. DEFECTS AND HAPPY FINDS IN THE RECORD

The principles on which the geologist relies in his attempt to decipher the past history of the earth and the life upon it are clear and simple—so simple and so clear that at first sight it would seem that the task of the palaeontologist, apart from the physical labor of finding and digging out fossils and the mental labor of studying them should be easy.

But nature rarely reveals her secrets cheaply, and we have not yet told of the complications of the task.

In the first place, even when a large thickness of rock shows every evidence of having been laid down steadily and continuously, year after year, it may well change its character.

For instance, clay, being composed of fine particles, will only be deposited farther from shore or in quieter water than the more coarse-grained sandstone: but a layer deposited off a coast which happened to be slowly rising (as for instance Spitzbergen is rising today) may easily begin as mud and end as sand, the one deposit gradually hardening into clay, the other into sandstone. And if it changes its character, the character of the animals and plants which live on and in it will change, too.

Mud-dwellers will give place to sand-dwellers. If the change is too rapid for adaptation the fossils will not show a gradual evolution, but there will be an invasion of new creatures from other parts of the sea-bed as the conditions alter. The old forms are extinguished and drift off elsewhere, and the palaeontologist is left with his story broken.

Still more frequently there is a break in deposition. The layer perhaps comes within the range of scouring currents, which prevent deposition; or it is shoved out of water by some upward movement of the crust of earth, and has its newly deposited sheets removed.

Later it sinks into favorable conditions and deposition begins again.

But now, whether the new material be the same or quite different from that laid down before, there is a gap, during which life has bequeathed no record of itself. In general, no widespread deposition will occur except when the coast is sinking, and very few animals will be preserved except when deposition is rapid.

Difficulties in some ways more serious confront us in studying the sequence of the rocks in many mountainous regions. Anyone who uses his eyes and opportunities on a railway journey through hilly or mountainous country will see that it is rare for the layers of rock exposed in the cuttings to be horizontal; they are usually tilted, and sometimes tilted at sharp angles.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 19.—For at least 10 years Broadway has not beheld an outstanding spender—a millionaire kid, a Coal Oil Johnny or a Death Valley Scotty. In other days a sensational wastrel touched up the first pages every few months with thick headlines of elegant exploits,

They were the sort who took over Rector's for the night and popped free champagne for all comers. They gave dinners to reigning beauties of the chorus, tucking a hundred dollar bill under each plate. Such capers added much glamour to the bright lane's fictitious fellowship.

In his dizziest days Harry Thaw was typical of the profligate guild. When he came into a cafe everybody from head waiter to hat check girl was certain of a substantial pourboire. He tossed an orchestra leader a thousand dollar bill one night to play his favorite tune.

Another notorious spender with his trail of gleaners was known as Maxie. He was a fashion plate of his day and his origin was surrounded in mystery. One of his foibles was to enter a restaurant and settle for every check just to watch expressions when patrons were told bills were paid.

The most spectacular spender of all was Freddy Gebhard, whose income of $100,000 a year—a gigantic sum in those days and nothing to hoot at today—was dissipated in high life. It was Gebhard who gave Lily Langtry a private car for her American travels.

He also bought her two houses, made then over into one and when his ardor spent itself married a Floradora girl. In most instances the end of the fast spender was poverty or disgrace. Although one turned from his cups at 40 and is now leading a simple and saintly life in Geneva, Switzerland.

The public attitude toward the spender is responsible for his disappearance. Once he was hailed as the prince of good fellows, a figure at which to point with a certain pride. Today he is looked upon as just another prize sap.

I have not felt like shooting anybody down like a varmint for quite a spell. But there was an itch to the trigger finger this morning while listening to one of those bores who tells every detail of the motion picture he saw the night before.

One of the Tenderloin's tough babies recently received an invitation from Al Capone to visit him at his Philadelphia cloister. He was torn between two emotions—the fear of going and the fear of staying away. So one night he shoved off for Europe.

The old Casino is doomed for demolition along with its neighbor southward — the Knickerbocker. The Casino in late years has been the scene of revivals. It was a theater of cherished memories and there were many old timers who would visit no other playhouse. It was opened nearly 50 years ago with the performance of "The Queens' Lace Handkerchief."

Under the Casino marquee for years there stood nightly a black-bonneted old woman — like an unlovely Hogarth etching — with white cotton gloves who held out a boquet of faded flowers. Legend placed her as one of the fallen stars of the theatrical firmament—a myth of an imaginative reporter. She had at one time been a scrub-woman in the Casino and when incapacitated by rheumatism had taken her stand outside. No one ever bought her bouquet but she collected enough coins in a short time to achieve independence.

The Casino flourished in days of gas lamps, puff ties and hansom cabs and an antiquarian tells me he had a box office man who wore full evening dress and white gloves on opening nights. It was also a mark of distinction to be ushered to seats by the house manager himself.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

YOU have a good side and a bad side.

Which predominates?

Is your desire to support the good merely to create a favorable impression?

Do you have a real struggle to keep the bad from coming to the surface?

Often you feel that you would like for once to follow your impulses wherever they might lead.

This forever having to think of results is maddening to you.

You feel tied down and you would like to shake off restraint.

At times this desire for freedom for indulgence gets the better of you.

You have given way to it, but you have always paid a heavy price for the game you played so recklessly.

Always it is coming up to mock you when you need the good side uppermost.

Most people have desires to do things that would hurt their reputations.

Many of those upon whom you look as examples of right living and good clean thinking are having as much of a struggle as you are to be honorable.

You should not feel that your temptations are greater than those suffered by your associates of whom you think so highly for they are tempted, too.
